INTRODUCTION

The County Registers from which the entries in this volume have been abstracted form part of the series of Apprenticeship Registers among the records of the Board of Inland Revenue in the Public Record Office [I.R.1., Volumes 41-53]. These registers record the payment of duties on apprenticeship indentures which came into force on 1 May 1710 as a result of an Act of the previous year.¹

Apprenticeship already had a long history in England before the Elizabethan Statute of 1563 made it compulsory for all artificers, but it was left to the Parliament that impeached Dr. Sacheverell to develop it as a source of national income. This taxation was a product of the French War, when many experiments were being made and, as with so many kinds of emergency duties, it remained in force for a century. Duty was liable on all indentures at the rate of 6*d.* in the £ on premiums of £50 and under, and 1*s.* in the £ on larger sums. It was normally payable by the master or mistress, except in cases where an apprentice was placed out at public charge or charity; though 2*s.* 6*d.* was in fact paid when William Bond 'a poor boy of Marlborough Charity School', was apprenticed to a Ramsbury cordwainer.² When masters refused to pay the duty, the apprentices or their parents were encouraged to do so to save themselves from possible prosecution. In the few cases in which the apprentice's parent paid the duty, the first payment of duty was itself taxed as well as the premium; when Robert Raines was placed with a Salisbury attorney in 1721, his mother paid 4*s.* duty on the £80 premium plus 2½*d.* duty on the 4*s.*³

The procedure was laid down in the Act in detail. Masters and mistresses who took apprentices fifty miles or more from the Limits of the Weekly Bills of Mortality in London⁴ were to bring their copy of the indenture to the local collector within two months of its execution. They were to ensure that the full premium, including the value of anything directly or indirectly

⁴ The series of Town Registers relating to apprentices in London and the home counties is somewhat different in form from the County series, being the result of a different administrative process. It has been fully discussed by Sir Hilary Jenkinson in his introduction to Surrey Apprenticeships, 1711-1731 (Surrey Record Society, Vol. 10, 1928).

given, was inserted in the document and to pay the ad valorem duty. The collector was to endorse his receipt on the indenture and to forward it within six months to the head office (the Stamp Office, 8 Lincoln's Inn New Square, London) for stamping and registration. At first local collectors or their deputies generally brought batches of indentures to London each quarter at the same time that they paid their receipts to the Commissioners of Stamp Duties. By the early 1730s the Wiltshire collector, or his deputy, came half-yearly and in the next decade his successor rarely came to London more than once a year. When the indentures had been stamped the clerks in the Stamp Office entered the main details of each document in a register. John Montagu, the solicitor to the Commissioners of Stamp Duties, became the first Registrar of the Duties on Clerks and Apprentices and was allowed £150 p.a. for his clerks who kept the register.¹ In due course the indentures were returned to the local collector, from whom masters could obtain them.

There was already a rudimentary organization in the counties for collecting stamp duties, another branch of wartime taxation. In Wiltshire the county 'distributor' of stamped parchment and paper for legal documents had been since 1708 George Clemens, who had his office at Salisbury.² By 1710 he had already been succeeded by Henry Axford (also known as Oxford), when the Commissioners of Stamp Duties appointed the first collectors of the duties on apprenticeship indentures in each county, authorising them to retain as their fee 18*d.* in every £ which they collected.³ Quite apart from the ad valorem duty, varying with the premium, there was a standard stamp duty of 6*d.* (later increased to 1*s.* 6*d.*) on each indenture; and before long Axford was selling printed forms, ready stamped.

Henry Axford was by profession an attorney-at-law. His office was at Devizes, but he was assisted in the south of the county by his deputy, Walter Bennett, at Salisbury. Throughout the history of this tax the chief office remained at Devizes, and when in the course of time a deputy from Salisbury succeeded to the main collectorship he moved to Devizes. Both the Devizes and the Salisbury offices were open for business daily, with the exception of public holidays. In 1720 Axford took as apprentice Benjamin Street of Devizes and shrewdly arranged that the boy's father, Stephen, should pay the duty on the considerable premium of 250 guineas (the highest noted in this volume), plus the duty on that sum, and the duty on that, totalling £13 6*s.* 3½*d.*⁴ When Axford's own son was apprenticed to a Bristol grocer, a few years after his death, it is worth noting that it was the master who paid the duty.⁵ Before Axford retired in 1729 Benjamin Street was already acting as his deputy at Salisbury and was now appointed head of the Wiltshire collection by Treasury warrant.¹ By 1741 Benjamin's father, Stephen Street, was serving as chief collector and was assisted at various times by Israel May, Elizabeth Bennett (possibly the widow of the first deputy), Thomas Martin and William Salmon. In 1750 Israel May was collector and was succeeded four years later by his deputy, Henry Williams.

The first year of their operation the duties on indentures for the entire kingdom amounted to £3,792 10s., two-thirds of which was netted in the metropolis and home counties. This was but a tiny fraction of the total receipts of the Stamp Office which in that year reached £185,635.² In Wiltshire an average of about £36 was collected from these duties on apprenticeship indentures in the 1720s, slightly less in the early 1740s and 1750s.

Four indentures relating to members of the Prior family of Keevil, 1744-50, have survived among the Chancery records as exhibits in a lawsuit.³ The text of one of them, corresponding to entry no. 1921 below, is as follows:

This indenture witnesseth that Joseph Prior of Keevil in the county of Wilts, by and with the consent of his brother and friends, doth put him self apprentice to Samuel Slade of the parish of Saint John the Baptist in the borough of Devizes in the county of Wilts, to learn his art and with him after the manner of an apprentice to serve, from the day of the date hereof for and during the full end and term of eight years from thence next ensuing and fully to be compleat and ended, during which term the said apprentice his master faithfully shall and will serve, his secrets keep, his lawful commands every where gladly do. He shall do no damage to his said master nor see it to be done of others, but to his power shall let or forthwith give notice to his master of the same. The goods of his said master he shall not waste, nor the same without licence of him to any give or lend. Hurt to his said master he shall not do, cause, or procure to be done; he shall neither buy nor sell without his master's licence. Taverns, inns, or ale-houses, he shall not haunt. At cards, dice, tables, or any other unlawful game, he shall not play. Matrimony he shall not contract, nor from the service of his said master day or night absent himself, but in all things as an honest and faithful apprentice shall and will demean and behave himself towards his said master, and all his during all the said term. And the said Samuel Slade for and in consideration of the sum of twelve pounds and twelve shillings in hand, paid by James Prior his brother, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, the said apprentice in the art or trade of a cordwainer, which he now useth, shall teach and instruct, or cause to be taught and instructed, the best way and manner that he can, finding and allowing unto his said apprentice sufficient meat, drink, apparell, washing, lodging and all other necessaries during the said term and at the end of the said term one good new suit of apparell, besides work apparell. The said James Prior is to be at half the expence of physick and attendance in smallpox. And for the true performance of all every the covenants and agreements aforesaid, either of the said parties bindeth himself firmly by these presents. The highly formal document, ringing with stately pleonasms, had changed little in two centuries; indeed the only notable difference between this indenture of 1750 and one of 1560 is the omission of a clause forbidding the apprentice to commit fornication, a sign, perhaps, of the worldlywise eighteenth century!

The Apprentice Registers are large, heavy volumes, whose pages measure 20 by 14½ inches. In the front of each is an index of county collectors, which is none too reliable. Attention was first drawn to the Registers by the Royal (Pollock) Commission on Public Records in 1910,¹ when they were at Somerset House, in the custody of the Board of Inland Revenue, the eventual successors to the Commissioners of Stamp Duties. The Registers were transferred to the Public Record Office in 1921 and were subsequently rebound. With commendable zeal Mr. R. Garraway Rice abstracted the early entries relating to Sussex from the County Registers for the Sussex Record Society in 1924.¹ The only other edition has been that of entries for Surrey from the Town series, which were edited by Sir Hilary Jenkinson for the Surrey Record Society in 1928.²

² A footnote to the indenture warned the parties that the duty must be paid within the prescribed two months, or the document would be void, the master forfeit £50 and the apprentice be disabled from following the trade.

In this volume are printed all the entries relating to Wiltshire from the first thirteen surviving County Registers. References to Wiltshire under other county collections, for example No. 75, where payment was made in the Bristol area, have been included. For the sake of completeness the few entries where both master and apprentice lived in counties other than Wiltshire have been included, since the duty was paid at Devizes or Salisbury.³ A list of the registers from which these abstracts have been made is as follows:

A further nineteen volumes survive for the period Sept. 1760 to Sept. 1808. The entries in these later volumes are, however, meagre, and even by the middle of the eighteenth century the keeping of the registers had begun to deteriorate. After 1760 the name of the apprentice's father (or mother) is not regularly given, his address is rarely stated and sometimes even the master's trade is omitted, so that the later registers merely record the fact that a particular master had paid so much duty on a certain day for taking an apprentice.

The outside dates given in the list above are the dates of the final stage in the administrative process, when the clerk in the Stamp Office in London entered the details in his register; they are not the dates of the indenture themselves or even the dates on which masters paid their duty to the local collector, which preceded the entry sometimes by as much as 6 years, sometimes by as little as 6 days. As a result, though at least four registers for our period are missing, the 'undocumented period' for the indentures is rather different from the gaps in the list. For instance the first Wiltshire entries in Vol. 50 (Apr. 1741—Dec. 1745) were for payments made at Devizes on 8 Dec. 1739 and relate to indentures dated between 1735 and the end of 1739.

The clerks at the Stamp Office wrote up the registers in the order in which they received batches of indentures from the various county collectors. There is a separate heading for each county collection, which includes the collector's name and the number of indentures forwarded. Those for Wiltshire were entered in two separate chronological series: the first, usually, for the deputy collector at Salisbury, the second for the collector at Devizes, in order of date of the payment of duties. The first Wiltshire entries in Vol. 49 appear on fos. 33-34 and relate to the 53 indentures brought to London by Collector Axford on 12 April 1729. The indentures themselves range in date from 26 Jan. 1727 to 18 March 1729, though most are for 1728; payments were made at Devizes or Salisbury on dates between 3 Sept. 1728 and 3 Apr. 1729. Each entry covers a double page of the register. There are separate columns for (1) the date when the duty was paid; (2) the number in the county batch; (3) the name, place of abode and employment of the master; (4) the apprentice's name and the name, place of abode and employment of his parent; (5) the date of the indenture; (6) the type of indenture; (7) terms of years; (8) premium £50 or under; (9) 6*d.* duty; (10) premium over £50; (11) 12*d.* duty. At the end of each county section the total of the cash received is given.

In this edition the entries have been arranged lexicographically by apprentices. The information contained in the register entry has been presented in the following order; (1) Apprentice's name, parentage, abode and parent's occupation; (2) master's name, employment and abode; (3) date of indenture; (4) type of indenture;¹ (5) term of apprenticeship, if other than 7 years; (6) premium. In brackets are given the date of the payment of duty and the short reference—for example the reference for No. 1, Richard Abbot's apprenticeship, is '50/133', standing for Inland Revenue Apprenticeship Register Vol. 50 folio 133. The following abbreviations have been used: A. for 'articles'; A.C. for 'articles and counterpart'; C.I.C. for 'common indenture and counterpart'; D. for 'daughter'; I. for 'indenture'; I. C. for 'indenture and counterpart'; S. for 'son'; S.I.C. for 'single indenture and counterpart'. Identifiable place names have been spelt in their modern forms unless the form given in the original is markedly different from the modern one. For Wiltshire places the spellings used in The Place Names of Wiltshire (English Place-Name Society) have been taken as the standard, and non-parochial places have been indexed under the parishes given there except in cases where the volume is known to err.

The commonest term of apprenticeship was still the traditional seven years and in the entries below the term is for 7 years unless stated to the contrary. The longest term was for 15 years, when a girl was placed with a Box woolspinner,¹ and there are seven instances of terms of 14 years, for weavers, millers, a clothier, a butcher and a farmer.² There are five apprenticeships of only a year (to two tailors and a currier of Salisbury, a plumber of Wilton and a barber of Warminster,)³ one of eighteen months and nine of two years.⁴ Tailors predominate in these short apprenticeships. On a few occasions, instead of a precise term of years being given, the apprenticeship was to last until the pupil reached a definite age. This was most often twenty-one,⁵ though George Bowles was apprenticed to a Wilton weaver until he became twenty-four, and John Bird to a Bromham tailor until he was twenty-two.⁶ In none of these instances, however, are we told the age of the apprentice when the indenture was executed. In one case we have precise calendar dates for the beginning and ending of the apprenticeship.⁷ It looks as if the 'perpetual' Act of 1710 had stirred John Bowsher, a Marlborough baker, to put his son's apprenticeship to a fellow baker in the town on a legal footing, for in March 1711 he drew up an indenture for a seven-year apprenticeship beginning some five years earlier.⁸

The largest premium, as we have noticed, was the 250 guineas paid to Collector Axford himself in 1720; the smallest was a shilling, when Daniel Beckingsale was apprenticed to Thomas Woolridge, a wheelwright of South Newton, in 1752.⁹ Edward Goldwyer, a Salisbury surgeon, charged £210 for each of his apprentices, the same sum which Isaac Green, a Trowbridge clothier, and a London lawyer required.¹⁰ The premiums of only 36 of the 2,760 indentures noted here were over £100; another 30 were of £100. Fourteen masters required no more than 5s. It is difficult to make generalizations. In contrast to the high premiums paid to Axford, the premium of William Slater was no more than £5 when he was apprenticed to another attorney, William Jay of Salisbury;¹ and premiums for boys placed with mercers varied between £105 and 5s.² Occasionally we are told how the total premium was arrived at: William Locke, a Warminster cordwainer, received a consideration of 2 guineas, plus diet at £4 a year for seven years when he took a local boy as apprentice in 1723, total £30 2s.³ Diet and lodging were invariably valued at £4 a year.⁴

Few masters appear to have had more than two apprentices at the same time. Though William Smith, a Salisbury tailor, figures in as many as six indentures between 1714 and 1721, four of his apprentices were for very short terms.⁵ The record was probably held by John Moore, a mason from Tisbury, who took on three new apprentices in 1755, each for a full seven-year term.⁶ Business partnerships ' & Co.' were most common at Salisbury, where we find firms of butchers, grocers, surgeons, ironmongers, saddlers, cabinet-makers and seamstresses. At Devizes the firm of John Richards & Richard Griffiths owned an apothecary's shop, and at Malmesbury William Browning and Co. were parchment-makers.⁷ The only other instances of partnerships were among the stonemasons of Chilmark and Tisbury.⁸

Having served his time and become his own master the former apprentice was at liberty to take a pupil himself. Joseph Blackhead, a Salisbury cutler, took one within two years of being free of his trade.⁹ Incomplete though the registers are, we can trace family patterns from these entries. For instance when Daniel Young of Brinkworth wanted to prepare his son for his bakery business in 1744 he placed him with the same Gloucestershire master from whom he had learnt the trade in 1721-8.¹⁰ Another family tradition is worth mentioning. In 1729 Edward Thompson, the organist of Salisbury Cathedral, took as his apprentice James Corfe, founder of a remarkable dynasty of church musicians. James published various part songs and glees between 1730 and 1750, but apparently no church music. His son, Joseph Corfe (1740-1820) followed in his footsteps and achieved more than local fame. Joseph began his musical education under the then organist of Salisbury, Dr. Stephens, and continued his career as a lay vicar in the cathedral and, from 1783, as a gentleman of the Chapel Royal. Ten years later he himself became organist of Salisbury, but resigned the post in 1804 in favour of his son, Arthur Thomas Corfe, (1773-1863), who had been a chorister of Westminster Abbey and a pupil of Clementi. Under A. T. Corfe the choir at Salisbury enjoyed an enviable reputation and at his own financial risk he organised a most successful musical festival in 1828 which put the Three Choirs' Festival in the shade. His eldest son, John Davis Corfe, was organist of Bristol Cathedral for over 50 years and his youngest son, Charles William Corfe (1814-83) was organist of Christ Church, Oxford. The family traditions begun by James Corfe in 1729 continue to this day.¹

There were many cases, as might have been expected, of Wiltshire boys serving apprentices in neighbouring counties and, in turn, boys from Berkshire, Hampshire, Gloucestershire and Somerset came to be placed with Wiltshire masters. A few came, or went, further afield. There were far fewer connexions with London than might have been expected;² only five Wiltshire boys appear in these pages as being apprenticed in the capital—to a lawyer, a currier, a cordwainer, a barber, and a surgeon respectively.³ Three went to Oxford masters: one to an apothecary, another to a cooper, and the third, little Jack Horner of Marlborough, to the barber to the University.⁴ A boy went to Carmarthen to learn the trade of a tailor and a Cricklade girl went to Chichester to become a milliner.⁵ Other Wiltshire boys were placed with a Liverpool carpenter, a Stamford apothecary and a grocer in Newport, I.O.W.⁶ London boys were serving apprenticeships with a Devizes clothier, a Salisbury joiner, a Downton cordwainer and a butcher and a gentleman from Marlborough.⁷ In Salisbury a stonemason had an apprentice from Greenwich, Kent, a cutler a lad from Cornwall, a joiner one from the Isle of Wight, and a saddler a boy from Longdon, Worcestershire.⁸ The apprentice furthest from home was Robert Gillmore of Waterford, who spent seven years with James Filkes, woolstapler of Devizes.⁹

One hundred and twenty women appear as 'masters' (compared with some 2,200 men), sometimes in conjunction with a husband. Most of them were mantua-makers, stay-makers and milliners and were having girls as apprentices. Girls were also apprenticed to tailors;¹⁰ on their father's death a brother and sister, Hugh and Mary Tilley, were rather touchingly apprenticed together to a Marlborough tailor.¹ On occasion a girl was apprenticed to her own mother, possibly because her parents were no longer living together and an indenture was a method by which the mother could gain legal control over her daughter.² Twenty-two women were following essentially masculine crafts, and one suspects that these were chiefly widows carrying on the business of their late husbands, as was indeed the case with Susannah Seggar, apothecary of Devizes.³ Ann Curtis, miller of Bradford on Avon, took a Somerset girl as apprentice and Jane Stagg, gloveress of Easton Grey, a local girl,⁴ but the rest of the widows had male apprentices, for learning the trades respectively of tallow-chandler, weaver, breeches-maker, baker, cooper, clothworker, barber, collarmaker, butcher and soap-maker.⁵ Domestic servants proper were not apprenticed,⁶ though Ann Chamberlain of Wilton was placed with John Sparks of Dinton for 'husserey'.⁷ The one mistress described as a 'housewife', Elizabeth Tackle, took as an apprentice for seven years either her daughter or her niece.⁸

A careful use of the index of occupations and descriptions will reveal many facts about the distribution of trades and professions in these years and bring to light a number of curiosities. Most of the attornies and apothecaries were, quite naturally, at Salisbury or Devizes and a large proportion of weavers and kindred trades were settled in the neighbourhood of North Bradley. Attention should, however, be drawn to four adult apprentices: two of them, described as 'yeoman', became apprenticed to a carpenter and a currier respectively, while a 'labourer' was learning the trade of baker and a London butcher was for some obscure reason placed for seven years with a Marlborough butcher.⁹ The student of Christian names will find much to interest him in the index of persons, though only 28 persons have two Christian names and none has three.
