PREFACE

The idea of publishing abstracts of Wiltshire inclosure awards evolved in 1967 when Mr. Sandell was using the awards to compile information for the County Council in connexion with the registration of commons. The awards contain a great amount of varied material for the history and topography of Wiltshire, and it is thought that their publication in digested form will be useful for many sorts of historical inquiry. Most of the awards are in the custody of the Wiltshire County Council, to which the Society expresses its gratitude for help in the preparation of this volume—apart from its generous support of the Society year by year—and for permission to publish the documents. In the same way the Society thanks the owners of other Wiltshire documents not in the Wiltshire Record Office, namely the late Earl of Pembroke, Mr. Ambrose Hussey-Freke, the Gloucestershire County Council, the Somerset County Council, and the Mayor and Corporation of the City of New Sarum.

Mr. Sandell has asked me on his behalf to express his indebtedness and gratitude, to which are added those of the Society, to the County Archivist (Mr. M. G. Rathbone) and his staff for their help in providing access to the awards, to Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Willoughby for making the index, and to Mr. D. J. Bonney for computing the acreages of parishes for which figures were not otherwise available.

The Society is indebted to Mr. Sandell not only for his labour in editing the volume but also for his generosity in meeting the cost of producing the map.

INTRODUCTION

Inclosure is the process by which land that has formerly been owned and exploited collectively is divided into separate parcels, each owner exchanging his share of the common rights over the wider area for exclusive rights in part of it. It is not clear how far, in England, arable land was ever tilled, sown, or harvested in common. What was characteristic of a large part of England was the grazing in common, first, of land that for part of the year was owned, cultivated, and harvested (either of an arable crop or of hay) by individual owners and occupiers in severalty, and, secondly, of land that was essentially pasture land. The first sort of land is characteristically known as open and common fields and common meadow, the second as commons and wastes, more specifically and variously described as, for example, greens, pastures, leasows, marshes, moors, and downs.

The commoners' rights were not necessarily confined to grazing, and often included the right to collect fuel. It is perhaps necessary to emphasize that rights of common, of the sort referred to here, were not common to all, but were the property of a restricted and more or less precisely defined group of commoners: on cultivated land the 'common'—the right to pasture beasts in common, or 'common of pasture'—usually belonged to the owners and occupiers of land in the village or manor, while on uncultivated land in addition to those owners and occupiers the commoners usually included also the occupiers of a particular class of dwelling.

An essential physical feature of land that was subject to rights of common was that during the period of the year when it was commonable it should be undivided by fences, so that the grazing animals could wander over it unrestricted. Equally, so long as there were animals at large, it was necessary, if they were to be excluded from a piece of land in fact as well as in law, to surround the land with a fence. Although in a literal sense it was possible for land that was commonable to be inclosed by a fence and for land that lay open to be subject to no right of common, the extinction of common rights and the fencing of the land on which the rights were extinguished were normally so inextricably part of the same process that the word inclosure is taken to mean both the legal act of extinction and the practical act of fencing.

HISTORICAL AND LEGISLATIVE BACKGROUND

In that sense, inclosure in England presumably started early, and there is some documentary evidence of it, in the form of agreements between the parties concerned, as early as the 13th century. In the early 16th century in England as a whole the documentary evidence of inclosure becomes more plentiful as the result of the Crown's attempt to control inclosure by major landowners without the agreement of their tenants: the Crown was concerned to prevent the depopulation of the countryside, which was thought to be the direct result of inclosure for the sake of converting arable farms into sheep-runs. It is reasonable to assume that inclosure by private agreement continued at the same time, albeit less well documented. Some agreements took the form of a number of separate conveyances, by each of which one party to the agreement made over to another his rights of common in the land which was to become the exclusive property of the second party. From the early 17th century fuller records of inclosure by agreement become more frequent, partly because of better record keeping and partly because it became the practice to draw up a comprehensive agreement. An example of such an agreement in Wiltshire is that for Hannington in 1632, the earliest of the documents printed in abstract below (101).

The desire to give agreements greater authority led to the enrolment of some of them among the records of the central courts of justice, in the form of judgements in cases brought collusively before the courts. The same desire may have motivated the introduction of inclosure by Act of Parliament, which also had the advantage, for those who desired inclosure, of making it possible to constrain a minority of opponents. The first of all such Acts was in 1606; its successors were relatively few until the sixth decade of the 18th century.¹ Early Acts were various in form, some of them confirming agreements that were made before they were passed, but what became normal was for an Act to appoint inclosure commissioners who were authorized to make an award in accordance with the terms set out in the Act. The terms also varied considerably from one Act to another, though they usually provided for the enrolment of the award by the Clerk of the Peace.

Because each Act was independent and self-sufficient, the work in preparing it and securing its acceptance was long, the costs were high, and the results were not always predictable. After many years of agitation (some writers say 140) for legislation to reduce the costs, the Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (41 G. III c.109) was passed. It was a 'Clauses Act' and was cited in almost every subsequent award, although commissioners covered themselves by adopting 'such provisions as are not repugnant'. The Act specified the duties of commissioners and the oaths that they should take. No commissioner was to buy lands in any parish to be inclosed within five years. Boundaries of parishes, manors, hamlets, and districts were to be determined. A plan was to be made and verified, public and private roads appointed, and herbage allotted to proprietors on either side. Small allotments could be depastured in common, and trees were to be the property of allottees who were to pay the former owners for them. Detailed instructions about fencing were included. Expenses could be deducted from allotments or raised on the security of allotments. Witnesses could be called but were not to travel more than eight miles. Rights of lords of manors were to be secured, and rectors and vicars could lease their allotments. Finally the award was to be enrolled in one of H.M. Courts of Record or with the Clerk of the Peace, and not more than 1s. was to be charged for its inspection.

The Inclosure Act, 1821 (1 & 2 G. IV c.23) enabled landlords to enter on allotments and distrain for rent. By the Inclosure Act, 1836 (6 & 7 W. IV c.115) open and common lands could be inclosed with the consent of two-thirds of the number of parties interested, and if seven-eighths agreed commissioners were not necessary. Otherwise one commissioner or more were to be appointed, and if any died or became incapable the majority of the interested parties were to appoint a new one. If they failed to do so within two months the remaining commissioner was to appoint. The commissioners were to appoint an umpire; their meeting place was to be within seven miles of the boundary of the place to be inclosed; they were to receive £3 3s. a day or a gross sum; and their decisions were subject to appeals to quarter sessions or assizes. They were to allot encroachments made within the last twenty years as part of the land to be inclosed, while older encroachments were to be treated as ancient inclosure, and they were to decide the course of husbandry to be followed until allotments were made. They were to settle who should pay for fencing, and could approve exchanges, the expenses of which were to be borne by those participating in them. The Inclosure Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vic. c.31) was to be construed with that of 1836, which it extended to cover lands commonable during only part of the year.

The Inclosure Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vic. c.118) started a new system. The principal Secretaries of State were empowered to appoint commissioners who were to act with the First Commissioner for Woods and Forests as Inclosure Commissioners for England and Wales. The commissioners were to report annually, their appointment was limited to five years, and regulations for their payment were made. The innovation ended the employment of local commissioners, and thenceforth the man who was the author of an award was known as the valuer.

From the same time the form of the awards altered, and the size of the documents became more regular. By that time tithes had been commuted in many places under the Tithe Act, and the new Inclosure Act allowed inclosure commissioners to make use of the tithe surveys. Among many other provisions were the following: no land within 15 miles of London, or 4 miles of a city of 100,000 people, or 2 miles of a city of 10,000 was to be inclosed without the authority of parliament; no village green was to be inclosed, though a green might be allotted to churchwardens or overseers for exercise and recreation; allotments for exercise and recreation could be made a condition of inclosure, on a scale relating to the size of the population; allotments were to be made for the labouring poor and for public purposes; encroachments made within the last twenty years were to be allotted, and rights not sustainable by law were to be allowed on proof of sixty years' use. Not all the awards subsequent to the Act of 1845 followed its provisions, since some which were completed afterwards had been initiated under earlier Acts.

THE DOCUMENTS

The collection of abstracts of Wiltshire Inclosure Awards that follow comprises 207 items representing 200 awards and agreements. The bulk of it is the 174 awards that were deposited with the Clerk of the Peace for Wiltshire and are now in the County Record Office at Trowbridge. In addition there are a further 25 documents from private collections in the Wiltshire Record Office (6 of them being duplicates of, or supplementary to, awards deposited with the Clerk of the Peace) and 5 awards of which the Wiltshire Record Office holds photocopies from other record offices, namely the Public Record Office (147, 180, 200), the Gloucestershire Record Office (122), and the Somerset Record Office (112). The collection is completed by the agreement for Hannington (101) from the archives of Mr. Ambrose Hussey-Freake and that for Fugglestone St. Peter (97) belonging to the earl of Pembroke. No attempt has been made to collect scattered evidence of inclosures which did not give rise to an extant formal agreement, or to search systematically for those that might be enrolled among the Public Records. Geographically the collection has been confined to the modern boundary of Wiltshire, and excludes Ashridge in Wokingham (transferred to Berkshire in 1844), Poulton (transferred to Gloucestershire in 1844), South Damerham and West Wellow (transferred to Hampshire in 1894), and Somerford Keynes and Shorncote (transferred to Gloucestershire in 1896), for all of which there are awards.² Chronologically, the earliest document is that of 1632 for Hannington (101), already referred to; the latest award for Wiltshire is that of 1883 for Seagry and Christian Malford (164), and the last award inclosing common arable fields is that of 1867 for Charlton Fields in Donhead St. Mary (74).

The collection does not include inclosure Acts for which no award is known. There was an Act of 1779 for Milston and Brigmerston, 19 G. III c.8 (Private Act), and it seems to have been followed by an award of some kind since the tithe award for Milston records that an inclosure award had commuted tithes on 776 a.; there are, however, references to sheep grazing in Milston as late as 1813,³ so the inclosure award may not have dealt with all pasture rights for sheep. Of awards following Acts for Compton Bassett, 1725, Staunton, 1732, Orcheston St. George, 1809, Everleigh, 1816, and St. Paul's in Malmesbury, 1819, no sign has been found,⁴ and the only indication of the award that was to follow the Act for Little Somerford, 1808, is a draft map dated 1815.⁵

² Cf. W. E. Tate's list, still useful though open to revision, of Acts and awards in W.A.M. li. 127-73; cf. (for Poulton) Trans. Bristol and Glos. Arch. Soc. lxiv. 54.

⁴ Respectively, 12 G.I c.2 (Private Act); 5 G.II c.32 (Private Act); 49 G.III c.11 (Local and Personal, not printed); 56 G.III c.68 (Private, not printed); 59 G.III c.5 (Private). There are Acts but apparently no awards for some places which have been transferred from Wilts. to, respectively, Glos. and Hants: Kemble and Poole Keynes, 1772, 12 G.III c.70 (Private Act); Whitsbury, 1798, 38 G.III c. 38 (Private and Personal, not printed).

INCLOSURE BY PARLIAMENTARY AWARD IN WILTSHIRE

Parliamentary inclosure in Wiltshire is but one stage in the agricultural history of a village community, and not perhaps as decisive a stage as was at one time thought. One reason why it was not more decisive is that a considerable proportion of the open and commonable land had been inclosed before the era of parliamentary inclosure, by processes that have left relatively little record. Moreover there is plenty of evidence in the awards themselves that it was not found possible to change all at once from an open-field pattern to an inclosed one. In many awards it was laid down that certain fields were to continue to be fed in common, some allotments being not large enough to provide feed for their owners' beasts or to enable the owners to support themselves. In Fovant (95) in 1792 new common arable fields were established, but the new arrangement seems to have broken down by the time of the tithe award; in some similar instances a further inclosure award was necessary.

The period covered by the abstracts printed below is, as already stated, 1632-1883, but the earliest was under a private agreement, not an Act of Parliament, and the last did not concern common arable fields, so that the period of characteristic parliamentary inclosure is limited to 1732-1867. There were only eleven awards (including that of 1632) before 1770, and they continue decade by decade as follows:⁶

1770-9	9	1820-9	21
1780-9	21	1830-9	9
1790-9	30	1840-9	13
1800-9	31	1850-9	9
1810-19	31	1860-9	14

There is no evidence in Wiltshire for the rise in the number of awards in the period 1760-9 mentioned by writers on inclosure in general,⁷ and indeed there are only three Wiltshire awards for that decade.

Nearly all of the early awards relate to the north and north-west part of the county, which lies on the Kimmeridge and Oxford Clays, the Corallian beds, and the lower slopes of the Jurassic. Much of the area was wooded, and was contained in the forests of Braydon, Chippenham, Melksham, and Selwood. The inclosures were of relatively restricted areas and among them were most of the inclosures of stretches of waste and common, notable ones being Brinkworth (29), Hankerton (100), and Wootton Bassett (203). Partly because the inclosures in the north and west tend to be early, few of them have surviving maps. The extensive chalk grasslands of the south and east, which supported vast sheep-runs, provide a contrast. The earliest award there was for Chicklade in 1781 (45), closely followed by those for Warminster and Corsley in 1783 (189) and Heytesbury in 1785 (104). The areas inclosed there were in general much larger than those in the north and west. Sometimes in the middle of such inclosed areas there can be seen on the map a piece of land not included in the award. In nearly every case it was where the lord of the manor had previously inclosed an area for his own use which was generally called 'The Farm'. The medieval deserted village of Middleton in Norton Bavant (146) shows very clearly in that way. A third, smaller geographical division of the county in the extreme south-east, represented among the inclosure awards by those for Landford Common (118) and Landford Wood (117) and for Whiteparish (191) lies on an extension of the Tertiaries of the New Forest.

A notable feature of the Wiltshire awards, further reflecting the geography of the county, is the importance of water-meadows in the agricultural economy. The value of water-meadows was clearly recognized by Davis as far back as 1794;⁸ Aubrey mentions their introduction in Wiltshire in 1635,⁹ while a modern writer takes them back elsewhere even further.¹⁰ Their importance is shown in the shape of some of the parishes: there are areas in the valleys of the Bourne near the Winterbournes, of the Till near Winterbourne Stoke, of the Bristol Avon north-east of Chippenham, and at Pitmead on the Wylye south-west of Warminster where fragmented and detached parts of parishes are evidence of the need for the possession of water-meadows. Some awards, notably that for West Overton (152), set out detailed regulations for their use.¹¹ Other instances may be traced in the Index.

Since the organization and control of husbandry on the land to be inclosed were essentially manorial, not parochial, the date and scope of inclosure in particular places reflect the attitudes of the lords of manors. It is therefore relevant to consider the interest and influence of some of the major landowners. The inclosure by a single award of Alvediston, Bishopstone, Bower Chalke, Broad Chalke, Ebbesborne Wake, Fifield Bavant, Fovant, and Swallowcliffe was carried out in that way because all the manors except Fifield Bavant belonged to the earl of Pembroke, who evidently initiated the inclosure. For the Savernake district there are few inclosure awards, but some private agreements have survived in the archives of the marquess of Ailesbury and there is in addition a composite public award for Great and Little Somerford (171) and Stanton St. Quintin (172), apart from their estates nearer Longford Castle. The Hicks Beach estates in Chisenbury de la Folly (142), Fittleton (93), Idmiston (109), and Keevil (111) were all inclosed under one Act, though by separate awards, and all within two years. The importance of the church as a landowner is reflected partly by the allotment of totals, in the awards abstracted, of over 11,000 a. to the bishop of Salisbury, and over 8,000 a. to the dean and chapter of Salisbury, and of lesser amounts to the dean and chapter of Winchester, the dean and chapter of Gloucester, the dean and canons of Windsor, and the bishops of Winchester and Oxford. Appendix II provides a table of those who received large allotments by the inclosure awards. Much of the allotments to ecclesiastical dignitaries was in place of appropriated tithe, though where an award commuted or extinguished tithes it did not necessarily cover all of the tithes. At Bremhill (28) the greater part of the lands allotted went to redeem tithes.

There is little evidence in the awards themselves about the degree of satisfaction with which they were received. Inevitably some people felt ill used. At Steeple Ashton (8) the award was delayed when Joshua Smith and five others claimed rights in the common fields there by virtue of their holdings elsewhere; the commissioners found against them; Smith and the others appealed to the King's Bench, and when the case was heard at Salisbury they were awarded 1s. damages and half of what they would have received if the commissioners had accepted their claim. There were similar claims at North Bradley (27). Other awards were delayed for different reasons: at Cricklade (68) one commissioner died and the other went mad; at Broad Chalke (41) a delay of 47 years resulted from failure to replace a commissioner who had died.

COMMISSIONERS, SURVEYORS, AND MAPMAKERS

The early awards were made by large groups of commissioners, which sometimes gave 'the appearance of a grand jury of umpires'.¹² Many of them were from the immediate locality. Purton in 1732 had thirteen (157) and in 1738 nine (158). There were six for Sherston Magna in 1743 (167), seven for Highworth (Broad Blunsdon) in 1749 (105), six for Chiseldon (Badbury) (51), and five for Heddington (103). The commissioners for the Heddington inclosure were nominated by the interested parties. In the last quarter of the 18th century the names of commissioners begin to be repeated in successive awards with the formation of a group of semi-professional commissioners. Richard Richardson figures in 63 awards; his address was in Devizes 1785-92, in Bath 1794-1800, and in London up to 1815; the Devizes directory for 1791 shows his occupation as commissioner.¹³ Francis Webb of Stow-on-the-Wold and later of Salisbury was presumably related to Edward Webb of Stow, who also appears among the surveyors. William Smith, the geologist, was sent to learn his trade from Edward Webb at Stow in 1787.¹⁴ Francis Webb figures 24 times as commissioner and 9 times as surveyor. He was described as surveyor in the Salisbury directory for 1791¹⁵ and seems to have moved there from Stow between 1780 and 1787; he died in 1815. It is worth noting that the two surveyors for the inclosure of Highworth (Broad Blunsdon) in 1749 (105) were both schoolmasters. Many of the commissioners were stewards to local landowners, such as Thomas Davis of Longleat, John Charlton of Stourton, and John Seagrim of Wilton. Many of the mapmakers made their mark in other walks of life; Henry Weaver, whose designs can still be seen in many of the houses on the Bowood estate, was agent both to the marquess of Lansdowne and to the Poynder family of Hilmarton, and author of a book on cottage architecture. Henry Augustus Biedermann, the maker of the Brinkworth map (29), was naturalized by an Act of 1804.¹⁶

The purposes and effects of parliamentary inclosure in Wiltshire have been discussed elsewhere,¹⁷ and it would be out of place to discuss them in an introduction to documents which record not the results of change but the process that made change possible. It is clear from the awards themselves that the scope of parliamentary inclosure in Wiltshire was limited because it was merely the completion of a process that had started much earlier. Its object was to make total a breach with the past and its traditional restrictions. George Herbert, writing in the year when the earliest of the documents below was sealed, represented inclosure as characteristic of humanity's opposition to established authority.

If God had laid all common, certainly
 Man would have been th' incloser: but since now
 God hath impal'd us on the contrarie
 Man breaks the fence and every ground will plough.¹⁸

ARRANGEMENT OF THE ABSTRACTS

The arrangement of the collection follows the principle that for each award there should be a single and separate abstract. In some instances an inclosure Act covered more than one place, but there was a separate award for each place: in such an instance there is a separate abstract below for each place. Alternatively one award may relate to two or more physically or legally distinct places, perhaps not even contiguous, in which case there is a single abstract below, though where possible the information relating to each place has been distinguished. Where a place has been affected by more than one award, each award is separately abstracted and there are cross-references from one abstract to another. An exception to the principle that each award is represented by a single abstract has been made with the award for Alvediston, Bishopstone, Bower Chalke, Broad Chalke, Ebbesborne Wake, Fifield Bavant, Fovant, and Swallowcliffe, since to have included so unusually large a number of places in one abstract would have been confusing.

An attempt has been made to discover the acreage of each parish at the time of inclosure, and the figure appears on the first line of an abstract or, where an abstract is sub-divided, on the first line of the sub-entry. (The figure is not repeated in successive abstracts for the same parish.) The acreage of a parish is to be distinguished from the acreage of the area subject to the inclosure award, which is given within each abstract against the word Area as mentioned below.

Each abstract has been made to follow, as nearly as possible, a standard arrangement. Against the word Act is given the regnal year of the parliament-any session and the chapter number; the chapter number is invariably given in arabic type, regardless of whether the Act is 'Public General', 'Private', or 'Local and Personal'. In the absence of any definition of the class of the Act it is to be assumed that it is a Private Act if passed before 1798, and a Local and Personal Act if passed between 1798 and 1860. Awards under the general Inclosure Acts mentioned above have the word 'General' before the reference to the relevant Act. In a few instances an award is made not under an Act but under an Agreement. The date of an Award is followed by an indication of any amendment, the date of enrolment where known, and the reference for the document. If the award has a simple Wiltshire Record Office (W.R.O.) number it indicates that it is the copy officially deposited with the Clerk of the Peace for Wiltshire; any reference-number preceded by 'Acc' means that the award is not the official copy but comes from another collection in the Wiltshire Record Office.

The Commissioners and Surveyor, as also the Lord of the Manor, Rector, Vicar, and the lessee of any of them, are so far as is known those at the time of the award, and those whom they have replaced or succeeded since the passing of the Act are also named. The name of a manor, rectory, or vicarage is not given when it is the same as that at the head of the abstract or subdivision.

Against the word Area is given the acreage of the area actually inclosed, excluding as far as possible all old inclosures subject to the award and all the exchanges of the kind that were effected by almost every award. The first figure is that given in the Act or the award; sometimes Act and award differ and a figure from each is given. The acreage printed in square brackets is of the actual area allotted, calculated by adding together the acreages of the several allotments. Following the area, each abstract gives the names of the main fields, downs, and so forth that were inclosed; minor field-names are omitted. The figure given against Allotments indicates the number of people or groups of people to whom allotments were made. The wording of the awards, where a single estate may be represented by several allotments, is not reflected in the abstracts, where all the parcels of land allotted to one man are counted as one allotment. Each 'public allotment', however, is separately counted. The allotments made to tenants holding by lease or copy are counted as part of the allotment to the landlord. The gross allotment to the landlord is followed in brackets by the allotments to the tenants, but it has sometimes been remarkably difficult, or even impossible, to ascertain the precise status of a tenant's holding. All those who received allotments are named; the extent of each of the larger allotments is given to the nearest acre, but private allotments of less than 15 a. are not quantified. So far as possible the figures relate to the original allotments, and take no account of the subsequent exchanges that were often recorded in the awards. The abstracts indicate the provision in an award for the responsibility of Fencing, whether by a general statement, by specification incorporated in the record of each allotment, or by an indication on the map.

The abstracts indicate in a general way the provision made by the awards for the commutation or extinction of Tithes and enumerate the Roads and paths of each type specified. The herbage growing along the roads was often awarded by the commissioners to the neighbouring landowners, as is indicated in the abstracts by the words 'Herbage allotted'. In those instances where the commissioners awarded the whole herbage of roads passing between allotments and old inclosures exclusively to the owners of the allotments, the fact is indicated by the words 'Herbage to neighbouring allottees only'. Against the word Finance is a note of how the expenses of the Act and award were met, whether by a rate or by the sale of allotments made for the purpose; sometimes special provision was made for the share of the expenses of a particular party, often the rector or vicar whose personal benefit from the inclosure might be short-lived and was neither transferable nor heritable.

An indication of the form and content of any inclosure Map is preceded by the name of the mapmaker and the date of the map, where they are known, and the nature of any Schedule is outlined. At the end of each abstract is a cross-reference to any other award affecting the same parish, and Notes of any interesting or significant features of the award that have not already been sufficiently described.

In the abstracts the spelling of names of towns, parishes, and villages has been rationalized in accordance with modern usage, but many of the lesser place-names and the personal names have been left in the form that they take in the awards and agreements.

Roads 10 public roads, 69 private roads, 5 private footpaths, 18 public footpaths. Duties for repairing public and private roads set out. Herbage allotted.

Finance The share of Abraham Ludlow settled by deduction from his allotment.

Maps (1) West and Rood Ashton. (2) Steeple Ashton and part of West Ashton. (3) Hinton, Semington and Littleton. Commonable lands red, old inclosures green. Allotments numbered only.

Schedules 7 schedules of rates, being a proportion of £10, to be paid by proprietors towards the repair of roads.

Notes Very complicated manorial system. Some lands in Steeple Ashton held by copy of court roll of Edington, lands also held as of the manor of Whaddon.

Claims by Joshua Smith and five others for rights in the common fields of Steeple Ashton because of their lands in Edington, East and West Coulston, Baynton, Tinhead, and Trowbridge. Objections raised by Richard Long and two others. Commissioners decided against Joshua Smith and others whereupon Joshua Smith brought an action in King's Bench which was heard at Salisbury on 3 July 1814. Joshua Smith received 1s. damages and was awarded half of what he would have got if his claim had not been objected to. Each paid their own costs. The award was delayed by this and other objections.

Schedule Proportion of expenses of £2,140 8s. 3d. (£2,840 8s. 3d. according to the award) to be paid by the eight principal proprietors.

See also Nos. 76 and 77.

Notes Inclosures made in the last twenty years included. Clearbury Ring planted by the late Lord Feversham. Holdings are described as copy, lease or freehold, bondland, boordland, and knightamhold, but the amount of each is difficult to assess; fines were reserved on certain properties. Very great number of old inclosures and messuages allotted. All rights and duties attached to original holdings transferred to new allotments. A difficult award to interpret especially as it is inaccurate in some respects, e.g., it gives two different dates for the Act. No mention made of water-meadows although there were evidently some there.

Notes The award dealt with inclosures in eight different parishes, 16,720 a. in all; see also Nos. 5, 20, 38, 40, 81, 88, 179. Except for Fifield Bavant they are all parishes in which the earls of Pembroke had a major interest and they are remarkable in several ways. In some, although the old common fields were inclosed and allotted to the several proprietors, new common fields were set up under the award, certain areas of downland were appointed to be fed in common, and new regulations drawn up for regulating the cropping of the new common fields. The arrangements for finance were that the lifeholders under the earl of Pembroke were assessed for their share in Schedule 2 of the award. Those who could not pay their share had it paid for them by the reversionary (the earl of Pembroke) and had to pay an increased rent, set out in Schedule 1.

John Hopkins; John Eastman; Rev. William Coxe as rector of Bemerton; Mrs. Hawes; hospital of St. Giles; 349 a. to continue to be fed and cropped in common. Fencing with allotments.

Roads 11 (whether public or private not stated), 2 footpaths.

Finance Rate on free-, lease-, and copyholders, but not on their under-tenants.

See also No. 195.

Notes The net result of the provision that 349 a. of the allotments were to continue to be fed and cropped in common was that the old strips were done away with and the old common fields reallocated in larger holdings which, however, were still farmed on the open system, the number of fields being reduced from five to four. The area affected lay north of the Wilton-Salisbury road and right up to the parish boundary but excluding a narrow strip by the Wilton-Salisbury road. The area in the marshes between Quidhampton and the river was not included in this arrangement but was finally allotted in severalty. GENERAL INDEX

References are to the numbers of the abstracts, not to pages, except for a few references to the Introduction which are preceded by 'p.'

The following groups of references to place-names are not included in the index: field-names and other minor local names; places named only to indicate direction or location (e.g. Calne in no. 34); places named only as being excluded (e.g. Pitton in no. 2); places named only as subject to an inclosure Act (e.g. Winterbourne Earls in no. 4). Subheadings are given under place-names only where the references for the subheadings are different from those for the main name (e.g., there is no subheading for vicar under Aldbourne, but there is one under Chiseldon); similarly, cross-reference is not made from the name of a parish to that of a hamlet unless there are references for the hamlet that are not given for the parish. The county in which a place outside Wiltshire lies is given after the name where it appears in its alphabetical position, and not elsewhere.

Under a surname, all the references to the same forename have been grouped together, except that references to the name modified in the abstracts by the addition of an address, office, etc., or by seniority have been separately indexed. Therefore it does not follow that all the references grouped after a name are to a single person, or that all the references to one man are in a single group: for example, the references that follow the first Thomas Davis of the four distinguished in the index may be—indeed probably are—to two different men, and there may be overlaps between that sub-entry and the three that follow it. The title 'Rev.' is omitted in the names of clerical incumbents; lay rectors are not indexed as such. A person other than a peer whose forename is not given in the abstract is indexed at the end of the entry for his surname, with a dash (—) in place of his forename, or, if he has one, a title. Peers are indexed under their surnames, whether or not the surnames are given in the abstracts. References to devisees, executors, feoffees, guardians, heirs, representatives, and trustees are not distinguished.

The Introduction has been indexed only selectively, the appendixes not at all.

The index does NOT indicate where a name occurs more than once in an abstract.
