PREFACE

Mrs Nancy Steele retired from the post of Honorary Secretary to the Society at the Annual General Meeting in July 1984 after thirteen years of working for the Society. All members of the Society are indebted to her, not least for the many successful Annual General Meetings which she organized, but perhaps only members who have served on the Committee can fully appreciate how much she has done for the Society. Happily the Committee still has the benefit of her help and advice. The new Honorary Secretary is Dr John Chandler, who is also the editor of this volume.

Dr Chandler wishes to acknowledge the help and advice given by two previous general editors of the Society, Dr D.C. Cox and Miss Janet Stevenson. He also wishes to thank the archivists responsible for the documents calendared here for their unfailing courtesy and guidance, especially Miss K.P. Stewart; Mr K.H. Rogers and the staff of the of the Wiltshire Record Office; Miss M.E. Williams and the staff of the Bristol Record Office; Mr D.J.H. Smith and the staff of the Gloucestershire Record Office; and Mr G. Toop of the Public Record Office. The librarians of Bristol Baptist College, Dr Williams's Library, the University of Bristol Library and the Library of the Wiltshire Archaeological and Natural History Society have allowed him access to published works in their care, and his colleagues on the staff of the Wiltshire Library and Museum Service have assisted him in many ways. To all of them he offers his thanks.

For permission to publish these documents in calendar form the Society is grateful to the Bishops of Salisbury, Gloucester and Bristol, the Controller of Her Majesty's Stationery Office, and the Wiltshire County Council.

The Legislative Background

The documents calendared in this volume resulted from the Toleration Act which received the royal assent on 24 May 1689,<sup>1</sup> and which continued in force (with alterations) until repealed on 30 June 1852.<sup>2</sup> This act<sup>3</sup> opened a new chapter in English nonconformity by removing from the established church the monopoly of legal forms of religious worship, and by enabling the dissenting denominations to progress from small bands of persecuted enthusiasts to a respectable, powerful and significant minority in English life.<sup>4</sup>

Owing to the large number of strange sects which had emerged during the comparatively tolerant years of the Civil War and the Commonwealth and Protectorate the Restoration Parliament was generally hostile to toleration, and a number of disabilities were imposed upon nonconformists; but in 1672 King Charles II himself attempted to remove some of these disabilities. His Declaration of Indulgence<sup>5</sup> was issued without the sanction of Parliament and thus without the force of law. Central to this indulgence was permission to hold religious meetings, or conventicles, and this required a system of licensing and registration. The surviving body of records of this brief period of toleration (it lasted a little under one year, from 15th March 1672), therefore, is a precursor to later registration, and the Wiltshire records have been included in this volume as an appendix.

After this brief respite, brought to a close by the recall of Parliament in 1673, protestant nonconformists were sufferers from the near universal hostility towards and mistrust of Roman Catholic recusants, and therefore of all religious dissidents, engendered at the close of the decade by talk of a 'Popish plot' to instal the Catholic James II on the throne in place of his brother. Their own antagonism towards Catholics only made matters worse, since it embittered Charles II against them. A Toleration Bill of 1680/1 passed through all its stages and only failed when the king refused to give his assent and then dissolved Parliament.<sup>6</sup> The dissolution of Parliament – it was not recalled in Charles's lifetime – ushered in a period of more severe persecution, which came to an end only with the reign of James II, 1685–8, who favoured toleration only because it applied primarily to Catholics.

James, like his brother, issued a declaration of indulgence, in April 1687; as in 1672 provision was made for the registration of meeting houses, but this time notification was to be made to local ('some one or more of the next justices of the peace') rather than to central government.<sup>7</sup> No records of registration under this declaration appear to survive in Wiltshire, if indeed any were ever made.<sup>8</sup> The effect of this declaration was beneficial to protestant nonconformists in two ways: at face value it sanctioned their activities and reinforced religious liberties; but the storm of protest it provoked, on account of its permissiveness towards Catholics, found Church of England and many protestant nonconformists marshalled on the same side against the Catholic threat. Thus the way was opened for the toleration of protestant dissent.

Legislation touching nonconformity had to concern itself with three matters: the kinds of nonconformity that were to be permitted; the activities in which nonconformist leaders and their adherents might or might not engage; and the places where nonconformists might hold their meetings. Only the last of these is our concern in this volume, and is considered here. The Toleration Act of 1689 stipulated that:

no congregation or assembly for religious worship shall be permitted or allowed by this Act until the place of such meeting shall be certified to the bishop of the diocese, or to the archdeacon of that archdeaconry, or to the justices of the peace at the general or quarter-sessions of the peace for the county, city or place in which such meeting shall be held, and registered in the said bishop's or archdeacon's court respectively, or recorded at the said general or quarter sessions; the register or clerk of the peace whereof respectively is hereby required to register the same, and to give certificate thereof to such person as shall demand the same, for which there shall be no greater fee nor reward taken, than the sum of six pence.<sup>9</sup>

The provisions for registering meeting houses enacted in 1689 were to remain in force virtually unaltered until 1812. They were not compulsory in the sense that transgressors could not be penalised under the act for infringement. The Toleration Act merely set out conditions which had to be met before nonconformists became immune from prosecution under earlier statutes forbidding such activities, which were not repealed. A congregation neglecting to have its meeting house registered under the 1689 act laid itself open to prosecution, or more likely harassment, from magistrates by virtue of Elizabethan and later legislation.

The 18th century, although it witnessed several attempts at nonconformist

<sup>8</sup> Welch, E. 'The registration of meeting houses,' in Journal of the Society of Archivists, vol. 3(3), 1966, pp. 116–20, comments (on p. 116) that absence of state papers makes it difficult to decide whether registration was carried out. But local quarter sessions records, the registering authority, may provide the answer.

legislation, not all successful, brought only one change to the registration of meeting houses. In 1791 an act extended to Roman Catholics many of the benefits of toleration, including the opportunity to have meeting houses registered, although this could only be done by quarter sessions.<sup>1</sup> Revision of the Toleration Act, which became an issue after 1800, was precipitated not by dissatisfaction with the procedure for registering meeting houses, but with concern at the regulation of itinerant preachers, whose numbers had burgeoned under the impetus of the late-18th century evangelical revival. A bill introduced into the Lords in 1811 generated massive opposition from the nonconformist lobby, and failed. A second bill, the Dissenters' Relief Bill, 1812, also failed, although its aim of overhauling the 1689 act was regarded sympathetically by the Lords.<sup>2</sup> A third attempt was more successful, and with little opposition a new Toleration Act received the royal assent on 29th July 1812.<sup>3</sup>

The Toleration Act of 1812 made several alterations to the procedures for registering meeting houses. Registration (by the same authorities) became compulsory for any religious assembly, 'at which there shall be present more than twenty persons besides the immediate family and servants of the person in whose house or upon whose premises,' the assembly was held. Arrangements were also made for the registering authorities to notify each other annually of all registrations relevant to each other's jurisdiction made during the previous year. The fee for procuring a licence was to become two shillings and sixpence; and the penalties imposed on an occupier for failing to register were set at between £1 and £20, at the magistrates' discretion.

Further legislation followed which, although it did not affect the registration procedures, had a bearing on meeting houses. In 1813 an act extended to Unitarians the same rights as their Trinitarian counterparts;<sup>4</sup> in 1833 meeting houses were exempted from church rates and poor rates;<sup>5</sup> and in 1837, with the establishment of the General Register Office, the Marriage Act conferred on certified meeting houses the right to solemnize marriages, provided that application had been made to the Superintendent Registrar, and a certificate delivered, 'signed in duplicate by twenty householders at the least, that such building has been used by them during one year at the least as their usual place of public religious worship.'<sup>6</sup>

The existence after 1837 of a central government bureaucracy to handle registration matters, the creation of a second procedure for registering meeting houses, and the general evolution of nonconformity since 1689, made it inevitable that the old order would eventually be ended. It was in fact the bishop of Salisbury, Edward Denison, who on 14th May 1852 re-introduced part of a bill which had failed in 1845, and which brought the system of registration to an end. In his speech to the House of Lords, moving the bill's second reading, he reiterated the history of the legislation and its original purpose, which, 'the lapse of time and change of circumstances,' made no longer necessary. He objected especially to the implication that places of worship 'licensed' by the bishop had in some sense gained the Church's approval, which was therefore seen to be condoning erroneous teaching.

And this feeling was further strengthened by the very indefinite sense in which the words 'Protestant Dissenters' were used. The Socialists registered the places in which they disseminated their doctrine of infidelity and immorality under the title of 'Protestant Dissenters.' The strange and impious fanaticism of the Mormonites was designated in the same manner. He had himself lately, in two instances, in different parts of his diocese, found himself to be the subject of reproach, under the idea that he had 'licensed' persons as Mormonite teachers.<sup>7</sup>

Denison had envisaged that responsibility for registration should pass to the clerk of the peace (quarter sessions), but in its passage through Parliament the bill was amended, so that the Registrar General, through his Superintendent Registrars, became the sole registering authority. The superseded authorities were required to make a return of all meeting houses registered by them since 1689, and deliver it within three months to the Registrar General, who would thereafter be required to publish an annual list of all existing certified places of worship. The bill passed hurriedly through all its stages in both houses in a little over six weeks, and received the royal assent on 30th June 1852, shortly before Parliament was dissolved.* The old authorities completed their returns, and these survive, but no list was ever published. The Registrar General did however prepare a report and statistical tables, which were published in 1853 as a Parliamentary Paper.<sup>8</sup>

Meeting House Certificates

Definitions. The process of informing authority of the existence of a meeting house so as to conform with the legislation just described is variously known as certifying, licensing or registering. Consequently confusion often occurs when describing the documents resulting from this process. In this volume certificate, licence and registration all have distinct meanings. A document produced by or on behalf of a dissenting congregation certifying that premises are used, or are to be used, for religious worship is a certificate. The authority's reply, sent to the congregation on receipt of a certificate, and sanctioning such use, is a licence. It was common practice for the licensing authority to copy some or all of the information contained in the certificate into a register; this copy, therefore, is a registration.

Since both the licence and the registration are derived from the certificate it is the certificate that has been preferred in preparing this edition. Until 1812, however, it seems to have been the practice of the bishop's administration to destroy certificates after registration had taken place; for this and various other reasons described below only the registration may be available, and in one instance (309) the licence alone has been found. After 1812 a fourth document, the annual return of registrations made by one authority to the other (the bishop to quarter sessions and vice versa), can act as a finding aid and a check on certificates, and in a few cases, along with the 1852 return to the Registrar General, may be the only source of information, both certificate and registration having disappeared.

In general certificates survive for the periods 1689–1745 and 1812–38 for the whole of Wiltshire, and from 1838–52 also for all except north Wiltshire parishes transferred to the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol. Between 1745 and 1812 and in north Wiltshire after 1838 the registrations have been used. The position is complicated, however, by the records of peculiars, borough quarter sessions and other stray certificates and registrations; the status of each entry in the calendar may be discovered by referring to the list of sources.

The wording of the certificate. The 1689 Act did not stipulate the precise wording in which a meeting house certificate was to be couched. Considerable variations occur, therefore, in phrasing and terminology, and this uncertainty about correct form evoked an occasional apology from the writers of certificates (279, 1587). Rarely were their efforts rejected, however (so far as can be known), and then only because the place-name was ambiguous (1003) or the document was unsigned (1228). One irregularly drafted certificate was rewritten and submitted afresh (846). The bishop's registrar seems to have been ready with advice about the form of words (893); and several early certificates (e.g. 163–5) appear to have been written by a clerk at quarter sessions, presumably from information supplied by the signatories in person.<sup>1</sup>

Typical of the certificates submitted to quarter sessions in the 18th century is the following (120):

To his Ma'ties Justices of the peace att the Generall Quarter Sessions of the peace now holding att Marlborough in the County of Wiltes on tuesday the seventh day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and one.

We whose names are hereunto subscribed doe Certify that the dwelling house of Henry Milsum situate in Kington St. Michael in the said County is sett apart and from henceforth intended to be used as a Meeting house for the exercise [of] Religious worr'pp by Protestant Dissenters Witness our hands – William Edall William Heath.

Following the overhaul of the procedures by the 1812 Act printed forms came into use. The first occurrence in Wiltshire dates from February 1813

(749). During the five years 1820–4 printed forms were submitted to the bishop's registrar in 32 out of 168 cases (19%); in 1830–4 the number had risen to 49 out of 132 (37%). They were used by all the main denominations, and several different versions may be identified by minor variations and on typographical grounds. But these differences do not appear to be of value in establishing the denominations using them. Manuscript certificates continued in use until 1852, but many were evidently copied from the printed form. Because of this no attempt is made in the calendar to indicate which certificates are printed and which are manuscript.

The wording of a typical printed certificate is as follows (manuscript insertions are printed in italics) (1101):

To the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Salisbury and to his Registrar
I Walter Hutchings of Netherhampton In the County of Wiltshire do hereby certify, that a dwelling House now in my Occupation in the Aforesaid Village is intended forthwith to be used as a place of religious worship by an Assembly or Congregation of Protestants; and I do hereby require you to register and record the same according to the provisions of the Act passed in the 52d year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act to repeal certain Acts, and amend other Acts, relating to Religious Worship, and Assemblies, and persons teaching or preaching therein;' and hereby request a certificate thereof.
 Witness my hand this Twenty fourth day of January 1825 Walter Hutchings.

From these two examples it will be clear that the basic information found in a certificate is the date, a description of the premises, and one or more signatures. In addition the name of the denomination is given in nearly half (45%) the certificates, although there are marked variations in practice before 1750 (14%), between 1750 and 1810 (82%), and after 1810 (40%).

Most certificates and registrations after 1750 carry two dates, the date on which the certificate was signed and the date on which it was registered and the licence issued. Very often, especially when a Salisbury minister was involved or the meeting house was close to Salisbury, a certificate might be signed and registered on the same day. It was not uncommon, however, for several weeks, months, and in one case (628) nearly three years to elapse between the two dates. To what extent such delays were the fault of an inefficient registrar is not clear; in some cases the certificate may not have been presented for registration immediately, either on account of a circuitous journey to Salisbury, or because of a postponement in the opening of a meeting house. Occasionally the date from which the certificate was to take effect was also stipulated (e.g. 1485, 1488). In six instances (342, 343, 623, 1121, 1405, 1422) the date of registration appears to precede the signing date, and clearly one or other date must be wrong.

Certificates submitted to quarter sessions may also carry two dates, the date of signing and the date of the sessions. In many cases, however, only one date is present, and some documents carry no date at all. If still enrolled on the appropriate great roll the lack of a date presents no problem (e.g. 14–22, 31–4), but once detached from their context such certificates cannot be securely dated (44–6, 94, 173, 207, 210–1, 242, 262–3, 274). Many certificates submitted to the bishop after 1842 carry only the date of signing, the registrar adding the date of registration only intermittently.

Four elements are commonly present in the description of the premises: the type of building; its ownership and/or occupier; the parish in which it was situated; a more precise location within the parish. Some certificates, however, reveal only the type of building and the parish, and in one instance (149) even the parish name has been omitted. Stalwart nonconformists may perhaps be excused a certain haziness about parish boundaries; very commonly a chapelry or township is incorrectly described as a parish, in one instance (779) the writer of the certificate admits his uncertainty, and several places are assigned to the wrong parishes (e.g. 500, 547, 1005). Such errors did not always go uncorrected. A certificate for a house at Lockeridge in Fyfield (857) was rewritten three weeks later with the correct parish, Overton, substituted (859). Even more conscientious was Joshua Russell, who in 1840 misspelled Snarlton Lane, Melksham, and a week later sent a further half-crown and a fresh certificate to correct his mistake (1552, 1554). Fortunately, very few place-names cannot be identified with certainty. The homonymous pairs of Bishopstones and Charltons may sometimes be distinguished by examining process notes (931, 1181), and the enigmatic 'Chitton' (1286) can be shown to be Chittoe. 'Moun-ton' (136) and 'Purton Dorset' (1584) remain problematical.

By contrast some premises are described in great detail, as in a title deed. Such precision is a trait of Marlborough certificates (233, 252, 253, 760, 1034), although it occurs also at Sherston (1131) and Sopworth (1132). One late Marlborough certificate (1618) gives the house number within the street.

Apart from the signatures and the denominations, which are discussed below, a few further points about the form of the certificate must be noted. Several documents presented in 1827 and 1828 were written in duplicate (1172, 1176-7, 1195, 1219-20), probably in the expectation that the registrar would return one copy as the licence. Printed forms of this period envisage such a procedure. The same thinking may explain a much earlier pair (243). In four instances two certificates for different premises have been written on the same paper or parchment (59/60, 755/6, 943/5, 1000/1). More importantly, no fewer than 23 documents certify more than one building apiece. The latest (313) dates from 1760, and most are earlier than 1710. The exceptional Quaker certificate of 1690 (24) cites a total of 22 meeting places. 89 premises altogether, mostly Quaker, are certified by these 23 documents.

Signing the certificate. The business of writing a meeting house certificate was very frequently undertaken, not by the occupier or chapel leaders who would sign it, but by another person, lawyer or nonconformist minister, more adept at the skills of writing. In one instance (972) a marginal note tells us the fee, 3s 6d, for writing the certificate; in another (1724) a solicitor appears to sign as a witness to the signatures. Doubtless the tradition of detailed descriptions found in some Marlborough certificates, noted above, owed much to involvement by the legal profession. For the same reason names are often found to have been spelled differently in the certificate and the signature. Such expert help was clearly needed in many cases, where some or all of the signatories were illiterate. In two extreme examples from Enford (490, 499) all six and seven signatories respectively sign with a mark. A certificate from Cricklade (1328) carries seven 'signatures' all written by the same hand.<sup>2</sup>

Four early certificates (24, 53, 100, 262) were submitted and accepted without a signature. An unsigned certificate in 1828, however, (1228) was rejected by the registrar and returned for the sender to sign. Once printed forms were introduced several examples may be found of a certificate signed by someone other than the person named in the text as certifying. Such irregularities are not, however, commonplace. Most certificates were signed by one person, usually the occupier of the premises or a nonconformist minister, or by a small group of individuals, who may be assumed in most cases to be leading members of the congregation. Men's names predominate, but there are numerous examples of women's signatures. Ministers are frequently identified, since they had special obligations under the Toleration Acts, and other signatories might add their occupations, or some other distinction, such as junior, senior, widow, esquire. In many cases equal weight was given to all the signatures, but often one person was regarded as the signatory, and anyone else was described as 'witness.' This practice became prevalent after the introduction of printed forms, since these were couched in a manner that required only a single signature. Three certificates (449, 831, 1547) have twenty or more signatures, and a further eighteen, mostly from the period 1785–1812, have more than ten.<sup>3</sup> In two of these instances (1227, 1232) the list is not in fact of signatories, but of occupants. Shorter lists of trustees occur in several 19th century certificates.

Few celebrities of more than local interest have found their way into this volume. David Saunders, 'the shepherd of Salisbury Plain,' made famous by Hannah More's book,<sup>4</sup> signed at Littleton Pannell in 1785 (384), and in the following year William Cunnington the archaeologist,<sup>5</sup> whose home was at Heytesbury, signed at Sutton Veny (390). Both were Independents. Several important figures in late 17th century nonconformist history signed early certificates, including Andrew Gifford (6, 19), Benjamin Flower (28–30) and Compton South (22, 144–5). In the 18th century the missionary activity of John Cennick in the 1740s has left little trace, and his name does not appear on any certificate, but his protégé, Cornelius Winter, signed at Wilcot in 1784 and 1786 (381, 389). Charles Maggs, the notable Melksham Wesleyan (620, 932, 942) and Samuel Heath, who brought Primitive Methodism to Wiltshire (e.g. 1141, 1143–4), are two of the many prominent Methodist figures represented.<sup>6</sup>

Delivering the certificate. In the 19th century the most active signatories were the nonconformist leaders of Salisbury. William Sanger signed 71 certificates and is mentioned on another seven, between 1810 and 1828. A Methodist or Wesleyan Methodist at first, he began to certify Independent Methodist premises in 1821, but seems to have courted the New Jerusalem church in Salisbury in 1825 (1145) and ultimately to have returned to the Wesleyan fold (1229). During his apostasy many Wesleyan certificates were signed and presented to the registrar by resident circuit ministers, such as William Gilpin (twenty certificates, 1820–3) and Isaac Bradnack (six certificates, 1825). The Independents also made frequent use of their resident Salisbury minister, John Everett Good, who between 1821 and 1831 signed or delivered 46 certificates. In many instances (e.g. 979, 981, 997) the presence of his name, as a process note or an endorsement, is the sole indication of the certificate's denomination. The Baptist cause was represented at Salisbury by John Saffery, a notable evangelist,<sup>7</sup> who was involved in ten certificates between 1813 and 1823, and possibly others.

The work of agents such as these, so important during the second and third decades of the 19th century, continued to the close of the period of registration described in this volume; it had probably begun when the bishop's registrar, and hence Salisbury, became the focus of most registration in the 1760s, but it can only be detected in full after 1812. This is because most of the evidence takes the form of marginal notes and endorsements on the original certificates, which before 1812 do not in general survive. Nor was it restricted to Salisbury. After parts of north Wiltshire were transferred to the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol in 1837, Gloucester nonconformist ministers fulfilled the same function for north Wiltshire congregations (1538–9, 1675, 1734, 1780). In Salisbury tradesmen as well as ministers might act as agents (778, 1002, 1121, 1125, 1497), not necessarily, one suspects, because of a strong nonconformist commitment, but simply as a favour to an acquaintance or a customer.

It is not hard to see the attraction of using an agent. Registration involved payment of a fee (nearly two days' labouring wages after 1812) and there was an understandable reluctance to entrust such a sum to the postal service. The ministers of the several denominations encountered their colleagues at regular meetings, and these, one assumes, afforded opportunities for the safe transmission of certificates, licences and half-crowns. As might be expected, this kind of informal arrangement seldom figures on certificates (1357), but another reason for using an agent is much more apparent. This was the fear that a certificate sent directly to the registrar might not receive prompt treatment. The commanding figure of William Sanger to bully the registrar's clerk into meeting a deadline was useful in this respect and was generally successful. Thirteen of Sanger's certificates and eighteen others include marginal notes about timing, and they range from the polite, 'Mr. Sanger will be obliged to Mr. Lush to let him have this in a day or two (862),' to the domineering, 'Mr.

Lush will let us have this on Saturday (913).’ His entreaties were not always obeyed, however (886). The use of an agent occasionally led to mistakes, such as assigning a place to the wrong parish (857/9; 1005/7), or duplication; in 1818 Sanger certified a chapel at Winterbourne Gunner four weeks after its licence had been issued (881/7), and on a day in 1828 the registrar, deliberately or otherwise, licensed the same house in Poulshot twice, having received certificates from two different quarters (1228/9).

Agents in Salisbury notwithstanding, many congregations did make use of the postal service, coaches or carriers to take their certificates to Salisbury, and the evidence of process notes and marginalia provides an interesting sidelight on the problems of rural communications before the development of an efficient postal network. Until the 1830s there is little evidence that the official postal service was used to any great extent. It is mentioned in only one 18th century certificate (280); between 1760 and 1812, as noted above, such evidence would not survive, but even thereafter references to the post are very few. One problem was that it did not serve every village; the congregation at Upton Scudamore, for instance, had to arrange for their licence to be left in Warminster (1338). After 1830 postmarks occur more frequently, and postage stamps and money orders might be used to pay for registration (1706, 1721–2). Hitherto the network of common carriers was perhaps regarded as a more trustworthy means of transmitting money, and it may be significant that Thomas Maffey of Shrewton in 1818 was happy that the licence should be sent by the Sarum post, but he would send the money by the Sarum carrier (893).

References to carriers (also described as drovers and newsmen) occur in more than 60 certificates, and coaches and coachmen in a further ten. Most are mentioned in notes written at the time of delivery by the registrar’s clerk to remind him who would collect the licence and when, and whether or not the fee had been paid. At least seventeen carriers were recorded, occasionally with a note of their destination or the inn which was their Salisbury terminus. Ten occur only once, but several were used many times. Gould of Donhead delivered eight licences to places in south-west Wiltshire between 1824 and 1831, Silcox from Bath was used twelve times at about the same period for the Trowbridge and Bradford on Avon areas, and ‘the Devizes coachman’ delivered nine. George George, the Marlborough carrier, was involved in at least fifteen registrations between 1817 and 1832. All but two were for places beyond Marlborough, including Cricklade (855), Highworth (1155) and Wootton Bassett (1326). For these a further journey by another carrier would have been necessary. Carriers appear to have charged 2d (1289, 1318) or 4d (905, 965, 1350) for their services. They operated weekly, arriving in Salisbury on Monday afternoons, and returning on Tuesday mornings; consequently certificates arriving by a carrier were nearly always registered on a Monday or a Tuesday. Thus a certificate signed at Coate, near Swindon, on Thursday 30th October 1828 (1239) had arrived in Marlborough (probably by the Saturday carrier from Swindon)* in time for George George to take it to * George Alexander in 1830: Pigot’s directory, 1830, sv. Marlborough.

Salisbury on the following Sunday night and Monday, 2nd–3rd November, and it was registered on Tuesday 4th November. The licence presumably returned to Marlborough on the same day, and was ready for the carrier to take it back to Coate on the following Saturday, 8th November. The entire process need have taken only nine days.

The Licensing Authorities and their Records

The legislation required that meeting houses should be certified to the relevant bishop, archdeacon or quarter sessions, who would register the certificate and issue a licence. In practice the archdeacons of Sarum and Wiltshire, who between them had jurisdiction over all parishes in Wiltshire except Salisbury and the peculiars, seem never to have acted as registering authorities. The diocesan registrar, in a letter to the Registrar General in 1852 accompanying his return, observed that, ‘as no such places have been certified to the Archdeaconry Courts, I have no return to make from them.’<sup>9</sup> A few certificates were in fact addressed to an archdeacon (e.g. 1692), but were registered with the bishop. In England and Wales 43 archdeaconries reported nil returns in 1852, and in only nine dioceses were archdeacons accustomed to register meeting houses.<sup>1</sup>

Registration by the bishop was normal after 1750, and nearly 80% of known Wiltshire certificates were certified to the bishops of Salisbury. In 1837 parishes in north and north-west Wiltshire lying in the deaneries of Cricklade and Malmesbury were transferred to the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol, whose bishop became, therefore, the appropriate registering authority. Certificates from such places, however, might still be sent to Salisbury, and as late as 1844 the bishop’s registrar was licensing meeting houses in parishes over which he no longer had any jurisdiction (1511, 1596, 1638–9, 1646). A few Wiltshire places lay in other dioceses. West Wellow, part of which fell in Wiltshire until 1894, was in Winchester diocese, and one certificate has been included (545B).<sup>2</sup> Most of Minety formed a detached part of Gloucestershire until 1844, and two of the three certificates found were presented to the bishop of Gloucester (730, 970, 999B). They have all been included. Marston Meysey, a Wiltshire parish in Gloucester diocese, appears never to have certified a meeting house. Several parishes or parts of parishes now in Berkshire were formerly detached parts of Wiltshire. They have been included unless specifically described as Berkshire. Kingswood, a detached part of Wiltshire near Wootton-under-Edge in Gloucestershire, has also been included, as has Shalbourne, most of which lay in Berkshire until 1895. Other border parishes, formerly in neighbouring counties and not in Salisbury diocese (e.g. Kilmington) have not been considered.

Some 48 Wiltshire places lay in sixteen peculiar jurisdictions.<sup>1</sup> Four of these, the Prebend of Chute and Chisenbury, the Dean and Chapter, the Precentor and the Treasurer, have preserved certificates or registrations, 24 in all. All but two date from the period 1790–1810 (23, 315). Their competence to license meeting houses is doubtful. Peculiars were not mentioned in the 1689 act, and no return of registrations was asked of them in 1852. Before 1790 and after 1810 places in their jurisdiction were licensed by the bishop, as indeed were places in other peculiars at all times. A certificate of 1790 (420) was registered by both the bishop and the relevant peculiar, and another (654), of 1807, was addressed to the peculiar but registered by the bishop.

With only five exceptions (23, 233, 252–3, 284) all surviving certificates registered before 1750 were presented to Wiltshire quarter sessions. As might be expected early nonconformists found it more palatable to seek the magistrates' rather than the bishop's approval for their religious meetings. But quarter sessions met only four times a year, and so a delay of up to three months might occur before registration could take place. It has been suggested that convenience – the possibility of immediate registration on demand – prompted the unpalatable switch from quarter sessions to the bishop in the 18th century.<sup>4</sup> No quarter sessions certificates have been found between 1745 (304) and 1784 (377), and very few thereafter. In addition to the county quarter sessions Devizes, Marlborough and Salisbury held their own sessions, and could therefore register meeting houses. Salisbury responded to the Registrar General's enquiry in 1852 with a nil return, and no protestant meeting house registrations have been discovered.<sup>5</sup> No records of the Devizes quarter sessions before 1842 survive, but a single registration of 1792 was reported to the Registrar General (434). Devizes alone of the twenty Wiltshire boroughs asked to complete the 1852 return responded positively. All the others replied with a nil return. Marlborough, however, which was one of these, had in fact registered three certificates at its court of quarter sessions, and these survive (233, 252–3).

Documents among Wiltshire quarter sessions records. For the first decade of registration, 1689–99, most certificates remain enrolled on the appropriate great roll (WRO A1/110). The existence of these certificates, 91 in all, does not appear to have been noticed hitherto. The earliest 22 are all enrolled on the great roll for Trinity sessions, July 1689, the first sessions after the 1689 act had become law. All the great rolls from Trinity 1689 to Michaelmas 1700 (four rolls per annum) have been examined. Most are bundles of files, and in many cases meeting house certificates are found filed with sacrament certificates. Two certificates (17,21) have been damaged, with the loss of significant information. Unfamiliarity with the registering procedure may have resulted in the loss of other certificates; the extraordinary Quaker document of 1690 (24), which should have been enrolled, was returned to the certifiers and is now with other Quaker records. A process note on the next certificate (25) may have been chiding the clerk for this error.

The majority of certificates submitted to quarter sessions, 223 in all, exist now in two bundles, part of WRO A1/250. The order of both has been disturbed, and so context cannot be used to assign firm dates to undated certificates. So far as can be known certificates in the first bundle all date from 1705/6 or earlier; the earliest certificate in the second bundle is dated 1706, and the latest is 1745. Parchment predominates for the earlier documents, but most later certificates are written on paper. Many show signs of having once been filed, and it is possible that other certificates remain to be discovered still filed on great rolls of this period.

No fewer than eight certificates were presented to quarter sessions during the first four months of 1745, but then no more have been found until 1784. Random examination of great rolls throughout the period 1745–84 has not uncovered any certificates, and none was entered in the quarter sessions order book, 1737–54 (WRO A1/160/7), nor the minute books 1745–81 (WRO A1/150/20, A1/150/21). Between 1784 and 1849 26 certificates (excluding Roman Catholic certificates) are known to have been registered by quarter sessions. Nineteen of these have survived, eight filed on great rolls (the latest – 1112 – dates from 1825), and eleven as a third bundle, part of WRO A1/250. The remaining seven, all before 1800, are known only from the quarter sessions minute book, 1782–95 (WRO A1/150/22). This and later books, until the series ends in 1824, have been checked in their entirety (WRO A1/150/23–6). In 1852, in response to the Registrar General's request, the clerk of the peace returned details of 23 protestant certificates, the earliest dating from 1784, and commented: 'All the books of proceedings at the Quarter Session for the county, from 1688 to the present time, were carefully examined, but no entry appears of any certificate having been filed before 1784.'<sup>6</sup> His return was deficient by at least 306 certificates, a salutary warning to users of the statistical tables in the published report. The clerk of the peace retained a copy of his return and the published report (WRO A1/255) alongside copies of annual returns he submitted to the bishop of Salisbury for the years 1815, 1816, 1823 and 1850, and annual returns he received from the bishops of Salisbury and (from 1846) Gloucester and Bristol. These returns are considered below.

Documents among the records of the bishops of Salisbury. So far as is known no certificates were presented to the bishop before 1742, and no Wiltshire certificate (except 409, discussed below) has survived before 1806 (643).<sup>7</sup> (Throughout the period 1742–1836, when Berkshire was transferred to Oxford diocese, Wiltshire and Berkshire certificates were treated in exactly the same way, but the following relates only to Wiltshire certificates.) Until 1806/7 certificates appear not to have been retained, but were copied exactly into the bishop's registers. Six occur in the register for 1728–57 (WRO D1/2/26), 50 in the register for 1757–76 (WRO D1/2/27), 61 in the register for 1777–89 (WRO D1/2/28), and no fewer than 199 in the register for 1790–1807 (WRO D1/2/29). Between 1807 and 1812 a few certificates survive, but most (76 altogether) were registered in two parchment books, running from 1807–10 and 1810–12 (WRO D1/9/2/4). The standard of transcription seems to have been quite high, many errors and idiosyncratic spellings being retained in the transcript, underlined to draw attention to the mistake. However, users of this edition must bear in mind that for the period 1750–1812 they are usually seeing the evidence at third hand, rather than the second hand of most of the remainder of the volume. Misreadings of names may occasionally be detected (e.g. 439, 729); more worrying is the failure to register a Highworth certificate of 1788 (409), which appears to have been erroneously returned to the congregation. Only by the accident that it has been reproduced in facsimile in a publication has it been included here, since it is not in a record office.*

All certificates known to have been presented to the bishop's registrar after 1812, and a few earlier ones, survive together (WRO D1/9/2/1). This collection, of about 1,000 Wiltshire certificates, forms by far the largest and most important single group calendared in this volume. They have in recent years been unfolded and arranged in order of date of registration, in eight bundles, covering the years 1806–15, 1816–9, 1820–3, 1824–6, 1827–9, 1830–3, 1834–9 and 1840–52. Many have the place-name and date pencilled at the head, and a slip index of places, now in the Wiltshire Record Office, has been compiled. They are generally in good condition, and many, as has already been noted, are on printed forms. A few annual returns of quarter sessions registrations from the clerk of the peace to the bishop are also included. Before 1836 many certificates for Berkshire places, and after 1836 some from Dorset are interspersed with the Wiltshire certificates.

Details of the certificates of this period were entered into two paper books, covering the years 1812–38 and 1838–52, which now form part of WRO D1/9/2/4; they provide a useful check on the completeness of the surviving certificates. Another check is provided by the annual returns of registrations sent by the bishop's registrar to quarter sessions, and surviving for every year 1813–51 among quarter sessions records (WRO A1/255). Copies of some of these annual returns, as well as returns sent to Berkshire quarter sessions, 1815–22, 1828, were kept by the registrar (WRO D1/9/2/2); this bundle also includes a single return from Wiltshire quarter sessions to the bishop, 1822. Finally there exists a copy of the return sent in 1852 to the Registrar General (WRO D1/9/2/3). It begins, as already noted, in 1742, the registrar admitting that he, 'cannot satisfactorily account for the Return containing no entry previous to the year 1742.'

those for Minety (730, 999B) described above, no Wiltshire certificates appear to have been presented to the bishop of Gloucester until after the see was amalgamated with Bristol and the deaneries of Cricklade and Malmesbury transferred to it in 1837. Thereafter a total of 50 registrations has been found, but no original certificates.<sup>1</sup> 36 of these were entered into a book among the Gloucester diocesan archives at Gloucester (GRO GDR350), which also has registrations for Gloucestershire places from 1824. The last entry in this book dates from September 1847, and from then until the end of registration in 1852 nothing more has been found among the archives at Gloucester. The deficiency may be made up from two sources, the bishop of Gloucester and Bristol's consistory court's annual returns to Wiltshire quarter sessions, which exist for 1846, 1847, 1850 and 1851 (WRO A1/255) and the 1852 return to the Registrar General (PRO RG31/2). Details of seven registrations, 1850–2, have been preserved in both sources, and a further five in the 1852 return alone.

Two stray Wiltshire registrations (1667, 1723) of 1845 and 1849 exist among the Bristol diocesan archives in the Bristol Record Office. The certificates appear to have been sent to the office of the archdeacon of Bristol, and were registered in a miscellaneous volume (BRO EP/A/45/3) alongside many others for Bristol and south Gloucestershire. This volume has been checked in its entirety along with previous and later volumes (BRO EP/A/45/2, EP/A/45/4) for the period 1837–52.

Other documents. Of the other record-keeping authorities little more need be said. Only three (23, 556, 605) of the 24 certificates known to have been registered by peculiars have survived; the remainder were registered either in the court act books (WRO D24/7, D25/6), subscription books (WRO D26/3) or on their own (WRO D24/2). The return sent by the Registrar General in 1852 to registering authorities for completion was a printed form in eight columns. Completed returns were bound into large volumes which have in recent years been transferred from the General Register Office to the Public Record Office (Chancery Lane), where they comprise part of class RG31. Details of 1,453 Wiltshire certificates were returned,<sup>2</sup> 81% of the total included in this volume; the earliest dates from 1742 (284). Only seven (730, 999B, 1579, 1584, 1717, 1772, 1780) appear not to have survived either as certificates or registrations among local archives.

The Incompleteness of the Record

The meeting house certificates and registrations calendared in this volume do not represent the total number of meeting houses certified in Wiltshire between 1689 and 1852, still less do they describe every building used for nonconformist worship during this period. This can be proved by comparing the known certificates with extant (or recently extant) datable chapels. An architectural description of Wiltshire published in 1963 lists at least ten precisely dated chapels to which no certificate appears to correspond.<sup>1</sup> In view of their vulnerability these survivors must be regarded as only a proportion (and probably a small proportion) of the total of apparently uncertified chapels which has existed.

One reason for incompleteness may be that certain congregations never in fact certified their premises, either, like the Moravians,<sup>4</sup> on grounds of principle, or because there was no necessity to do so. Under the 1689 act, as we have seen, registration was not compulsory, although failure to register exposed a congregation to the force of earlier statutes; after 1812 registration was compulsory, but only for gatherings in excess of twenty people.

A second explanation is the fallibility of those operating the registration system. Two certificates (24, 409), potentially lost through human error, have already been cited; a third seems to be hinted at in the note, 'also one for Steple Ashton,' appended to a certificate of 1828 (1247). As further nonconformist deposits come into record offices, and as more research is carried out on nonconformist records in general, stray certificates may come to light.

A third, and potentially far more serious, reason for incompleteness is that whole collections of documents may have been lost, destroyed, or never properly kept. Most worrying are the absence of any registrations among the bishops of Salisbury's records before 1742, and the abrupt break in the quarter sessions sequence in 1745. There may, of course, have been a deliberate decision on the part of the two authorities to refer from one to the other all nonconformist registration at these dates. In Ely diocese a complaint in 1761 led to an instruction that no more licences were to be granted without express orders from the bishop, and, 'to tell such people as apply to the bishop's office for licences for meeting houses, to apply to the justices at the quarter sessions.'<sup>3</sup> Perhaps the bishop of Salisbury's registrar obeyed a similar instruction until 1742, about which we know nothing. But if this was not the case, then some early certificates could have been lost. The neighbouring diocese of Winchester had registered 98 meeting houses before 1740, and Gloucester diocese had registered 35.<sup>6</sup> On the other hand Salisbury diocese was not the only late starter: Exeter returned no registrations before 1730, and only nineteen before 1780; Peterborough diocese appears to have begun registering only in the 1770s; only one Staffordshire meeting house, so far as is known, was certified to an ecclesiastical court before 1791.<sup>7</sup> The bishop of Salisbury's registers are complete throughout the period of possible registration, and it is in these that the earliest registrations occur. If meeting houses were certified to the bishop before 1742, either no details were kept, or a separate register was maintained which has since been lost. Both these possibilities would seem to be unlikely, since registration was a requirement imposed on the registrar in the 1689 act, and the records of the bishops of Salisbury have in general been well kept; probably therefore, no records have been lost in this way.

The records of quarter sessions are a different matter. The sequence ends suddenly in 1745, no copy was made in order or minute books of the certificates which survive, and even the survivors had been mislaid at the time of the 1852 return. Suspicions are confirmed by the existence of the licence (309) of 1756 for which no certificate survives, either as part of a bundle or filed on the relevant great roll. The most likely explanation is that a bundle of certificates, beginning ca. 1745 and ending before 1784, has been lost. If this has happened, only a vague estimate of the number of documents involved can be attempted. At the national level there can be no doubt that the trend in the mid-18th century was veering away from quarter sessions towards the ecclesiastical courts. The intermittent and infrequent use made of Wiltshire sessions in the 1780s and later may have continued a practice begun in 1760 or even earlier. Oxfordshire quarter sessions returned only one registration in the 1750s and none at all in the 1760s or 1770s; Somerset returned over one hundred between 1750 and 1759, thereafter the decadal totals to 1800 were 40, four, five, three.* The national totals of registrations by all authorities, according to the 1852 returns, suggests that the nadir was reached between 1720 and 1770;<sup>9</sup> comparison with Wiltshire registrations suggests that at most periods Wiltshire corresponds quite closely with the national trend, and that the shortfall between 1745 and 1784 may be fairly small. A reasonable estimate of the number of quarter sessions certificates lost might be between ten and 40, or 0.5% – 2.0% of those surviving.

It may be reasonably assumed that no major collections of certificates or registrations are absent from this volume. A few may have perished with the borough records or peculiars, or may remain to be found; some have been lost at Gloucester, but these are known from the 1852 return. All things considered this volume probably comprises details of at least 95%, and perhaps 99% of all certificates ever presented for Wiltshire meeting houses.

The Dissenters and their Premises

An eloquent and perceptive account of the history of Wiltshire nonconformity has already been published.<sup>1</sup> The comments which follow are restricted to

<sup>9</sup> Summarised in Gilbert, A.D. Religion and society in industrial England, Longman, 1976, p. 34. It should be borne in mind, of course, that the statistics are derived from the very class of records that we are showing to be defective, and so the argument is in a sense circular.

statistical and geographical matters which meeting house certificates serve to illustrate, and to miscellaneous observations derived from them.

Dissent touched every part of Wiltshire, and no area was devoid of certified meeting houses. 42 of the county's 312 ancient parishes, however, are not represented in this volume.<sup>2</sup> Most were very small, and have since disappeared as administrative units; five are no longer in Wiltshire. Nevertheless fourteen parishes with populations (in 1811) in excess of 150 appear to have had no meeting houses between 1689 and 1852.<sup>3</sup> Six of these lay in the extreme north of the county, and four more in the Marlborough-Pewsey area. Most seem to fall into the classic 'closed village' mould,<sup>4</sup> in which all or nearly all the land belonged to a single owner; such squirearchies might not welcome the dissenting evangelists. By contrast 'open villages' comprising many small freeholders, and parishes which included several distinct settlements remote from the parish church, tended to be more favourably disposed towards nonconformity. At Stratton St Margaret in 1744 the inconvenience of a long walk to church was made the excuse for certifying a meeting house (292). The ancient parish of Downton, of nearly 12,500 acres and many small owners, figures in 40 certificates; other examples of a disproportionately large number are Brinkworth, the Donheads, Highworth, Kington St Michael and East Knoyle. Brinkworth is interesting as an example of a village which twice witnessed a nonconformist awakening. Proselytised by Presbyterians, Quakers, Independents and Moravians in the 18th century and before, it became a hotbed of dissent. 'Our parish a few years ago swarmed with sectaries,' wrote the rector in 1783, 'at present they are few in number.'<sup>5</sup> But 40 years later Brinkworth became the centre of Primitive Methodist activity for an area extending over much of Wiltshire and neighbouring counties.<sup>6</sup> A particularly noticeable feature is the prominence in nonconformist life of villages – many of them not separate parishes – close to towns. Thus Crockerton (in Longbridge Deverill), near Warminster, Quidhampton (in Fugglestone St Peter) between Salisbury and Wilton, Ogbourne St George near Marlborough, Westport St Mary on the outskirts of Malmesbury, Seend (in Melksham) between Melksham and Devizes, Bratton (in Westbury), and Southwick (in North Bradley), close to Trowbridge.

Meeting house certificates are not a good indicator of nonconformist adherence, but they do offer some of the best evidence available for nonconformist evangelism. They therefore portray the 'active' side of nonconformity and may be compared with the 'passive' side, depicted in censuses of nonconformist allegiance in 1676, 1829 and 1851. For instance, there was no procedure for de-registration, but clearly many of the certificates for dwelling-houses foreshadowed chapel building; when the chapel opened the dwelling-house was no longer required for worship. In March 1851, according to the ecclesiastical census, there were 372 nonconformist meeting houses in Wiltshire (excluding Roman Catholics), or about 20% of the total number of premises (1,839) which we know to have been registered up to that date.<sup>7</sup> In very crude terms, therefore, four out of every five buildings certified were no longer being used for worship in 1851. Returns to an enquiry about nonconformity in 1829, which survive in the Wiltshire Record Office,<sup>8</sup> enable us to explore this pattern of wastage further, before the evangelical revival of the 18th and early 19th centuries had begun to subside. Comparison between these returns and the documents calendared here confirms that licensed dwelling-houses were ephemeral, but purpose-built chapels were more permanent. In Malmesbury hundred, for example, twelve chapels and nine licensed houses were used for worship in 1829, whereas only eleven chapels but 73 houses are known to have been licensed. The pattern is repeated elsewhere: in Selkley hundred (around Marlborough) three chapels and five houses were in use, but six chapels and 41 houses had been licensed.

The chronological arrangement employed in this volume permits us to gauge the pace of registration and to compare it with national trends. From a peak of about ten around 1700 yearly registrations fell erratically to almost nil in 1760, but then climbed steadily to attain about twenty in 1800 and 35 around 1825, sliding dramatically thereafter, to about ten by 1850. The Wiltshire totals follow national trends fairly closely, generally representing slightly less than one-twentieth of the total for England and Wales. But there are three anomalies: between 1695 and 1745 Wiltshire forms a considerably larger proportion than one-twentieth (perhaps nearly one-twelfth between 1695 and 1705) – this is possibly accounted for by defects in the national totals derived from the 1852 return. Between 1745 and 1775 Wiltshire dips more emphatically than the national figure; it is suggested above that some Wiltshire certificates have been lost at this period. The third anomaly occurs between 1798 and 1800, when far more meeting houses were registered than might be expected. The reason for this – a pamphlet controversy which led to fears that registration would be curtailed – has been well described.<sup>9</sup>

The denominations of rather more than three-quarters of the certificates are known or may be surmised, and there are few surprises. Most belong either to the so-called 'old dissent,' the 'new dissent,' or Methodism.

The old dissenting tradition, represented by Presbyterians, Quakers and Baptists, had a near-monopoly of assignable certificates before 1750, some 200

<sup>7</sup> Report on the census of religious worship in England and Wales, 1851, 1853 (1852/3, ch.lxxxix), pp. 47–9. The total of 1,839 is achieved by allowing for certificates which include more than one meeting house, but subtracting those certified after 30th March 1851.

divided fairly equally between them. Geographically they were concentrated in areas of Wiltshire where nonconformity had been strong before toleration,<sup>1</sup> in and around the west Wiltshire manufacturing towns, with outlying clusters in and to the west of Salisbury, around Marlborough, and between Malmesbury and Wootton Bassett. Salisbury Plain, the Vale of Pewsey and the Marlborough Downs are hardly represented. By 1750 the old dissenting tradition had almost burnt itself out. Only four Quaker and three Presbyterian certificates occur between 1750 and 1800, and none thereafter. The Baptists appear to continue unabated, although the simple term 'Baptist' applied to certificates before and after 1750 masks a serious doctrinal rift, the Baptists of the old dissent veering towards Arminian or General Baptist principles, and in some cases to Unitarianism, the new dissenting Baptists more Calvinist in outlook, often describing themselves as Particular Baptists.

The main thrust of chapel building and evangelism in the fifty years after 1770 lay with the Independents and the Methodists. The Independents (or Congregationalists – now usually United Reformed) were in a sense successors to the old Presbyterian tradition. In all nearly 400 certificates may be assigned to them, most dating 1770–1820, but with substantial numbers before and after. They cast their net more widely than their predecessors, but were still noticeably fewer in the Swindon-Marlborough-Ludgershall areas, on Salisbury Plain and in the extreme south-east, around Downton. Their progress was mirrored by the Baptists, with about one hundred certificates between 1770 and 1820. The areas covered were much the same, although evangelising groups in Melksham, Shrewton and Downton resulted in clusters of certificates in these areas. In a few instances (612, 623, 640, 644, 682, 736, 761) Baptists and Independents jointly certified a meeting house.

The first Methodist registration occurred for Bradford on Avon in 1756 (309), and by 1800 45 are known; but Methodism's main impetus came in the 19th century, with more than 500 assignable certificates of all Methodist persuasions. Arminian and Calvinistic Methodists certified in 1808–9 (666, 669, 670), and from 1817 the appellation 'Wesleyan' began to appear (862) to distinguish the mainstream connexion from its factions. Of these the Independent Methodists (sometimes described as Tent Methodists), who registered 25 meeting houses between 1821 and 1825, and two 1840/2, and the Primitive Methodists (181 certificates from 1825 onwards) were the most important. The Wesleyans were most active between 1810 and 1830, evangelising a great tract of country from Warminster and Bradford on Avon in the west, through Devizes and the Vale of Pewsey to the Marlborough-Swindon area in the east, with a second centre of activity around Salisbury and the south-east corner. After 1830 the limelight was stolen by the Primitive Methodists, who from bases in Brinkworth, Chippenham, Wootton Bassett and Salisbury tackled the remainder of Wiltshire, the northern clayland villages and the north-east, the Savernake–Chute eastern fringe, the valleys west of Salisbury, and a foray into the industrial west.

Apart from the main dissenting traditions, a number of smaller sects may be identified, including the Sandemanians in Trowbridge (335), Peculiar Calvinists in Marlborough (649), 'New Lights' in Westbury (854), New Jerusalemites in Salisbury (1145, 1221, 1277, 1414, 1452, 1557, 1657), and a Catholic Apostolic group in Melksham (1445). The Mormons appear to have registered anonymously at least nine meeting houses between 1845 and 1850 (1673–1745, passim), giving point to the bishop of Salisbury's remarks quoted earlier. Of the 407 certificates to which no denomination has been assigned, a number might be identifiable through detailed local or denominational knowledge; they may include the five Plymouth Brethren communities returned in the 1851 census. Doubtless a proportion offered allegiance to no denomination, such as those planted by the Marlborough ironmonger and non-denominational evangelist Joseph Phelps between 1837 and 1850,<sup>2</sup> or the Salisbury Temperance Society, who certified their premises in 1845 (1668). A group in Bradford on Avon went so far as to certify a room for use 'by persons protestant and not dissenting from the established church.' (1070). And what are we to make of the bishop's assertion that Socialist groups registered their meeting places under the guise of protestant dissenters? If this is true many of the unassigned certificates of the late 1830s and 1840s might in fact belong to Chartists. Indeed one Trowbridge certificate of 1839 (1536) corresponds to the so-called 'Democratic Chapel' allegedly licensed for the Chartists;<sup>3</sup> six weeks later a room was certified in Bradford on Avon (1541) by Gideon Allen, a leading figure in the Bradford Working Men's Association.<sup>4</sup>

The number of occupations mentioned in the certificates (about 200, excluding carriers) is far too small to draw any conclusion about the social groups from which adherents were recruited, except to note a good mixture, of labourers and farmers, schoolmasters and carpenters, shepherds and clothiers. This diversity is reflected too in some of the premises which were registered. Most were described simply as houses, dwellinghouses or chapels, with a number of barns, schoolrooms and inns. Sometimes individual rooms within a building were specified (e.g. 189, 410, 523), or adjoining buildings, such as outhouses, workshops and yards. In the case of a chapel a certificate might name also the burying ground (563, 575, 1643) or the vestry (642, 1267). Industrial premises of various kinds were also brought into use as makeshift meeting houses, including malshouses (238, 413, 939, 1075), a brewery (1073), a warehouse (1105) and a silkhouse (1268), as well as premises adjoining a papermill (365), a slaughterhouse (344), a factory (999A) and a stable (1469). When a congregation had outgrown a private house but had no chapel a hall might be taken over for worship, such as the Shoemakers' Hall in Salisbury (310), Trowbridge barracks (984), or Salisbury Masonic Hall (1443); even Marlborough Town Hall was commandeered (248). Meetings out of doors or in tents might also be certified, in fields (888, 1044), an orchard (1040) and a garden (1041). Perhaps the most unlikely place to find in use as a licensed meeting house was a parsonage house, certified by Methodists at Whiteparish in 1798 (508).

The process of building or acquiring a meeting house is occasionally illuminated by these documents. An existing building might be fitted up for religious use (370, 571); or a new building might be certified even before possession had been taken from the contractor (1776). Extensions to an existing chapel might require that a new licence be obtained (426, 1492), and while the meeting house was being repaired alternative premises might be needed (307). Several congregations found a disused meeting house which had been built for a different denomination, and took it over for their own use (e.g. 575, 1149, 1566); this practice occurred as early as 1728 (254). The most spectacular example of re-use (if indeed all the references are to the same place) is the suite of rooms attached to the George Inn, Salisbury. Licensed for Baptists in 1817 (853), the Tent Methodists had it in 1823 (1053), it accommodated the New Jerusalem Church in 1825 (1145), the Primitive Methodists in 1829 (1262), the New Jerusalemites again in 1836 and 1840 (1452, 1557), and finally the Mormons in 1850 (1735).

Editorial Method

In calendaring these documents all significant information and, so far as is possible, the character of the original, has been retained, whilst the details have been rearranged in a consistent order eliminating common form. In general the guidelines for editors laid down by Dr. Hunnisett have been followed;<sup>5</sup> but instead of appearing as footnotes annotations have been consigned to square brackets immediately after the information to which they relate. Where both certificate and registration survive the certificate has been used; where the certificate has been lost the registration has been used in preference to the annual or 1852 return; in a few cases where both certificate and registration are missing the annual and the 1852 returns if both exist have been cited with a note of discrepancies between them. The only Wiltshire meeting-house certificates and registrations intentionally omitted from this edition are those relating to Roman Catholics, those relating to a few places formerly in another county (described above), and those submitted to the Registrar General under the legislation of 1837, 1852 and later. The parts of the entry are described below in the order of citation.

Dates, and ordering of entries. All dates are cited according to new style reckoning. A date not enclosed in brackets is one which appears on the certificate (or registered copy) as the date of signing. A date in round brackets is the date of registration or the issue of a licence. Many certificates do not carry the latter; some have only the date of registration, or none at all. Where there is none an approximate date has been supplied in square brackets, based on the context in which the document was discovered. The reasoning may be apparent from the source (e.g. a document enrolled on WRO A1/110 T1689, the great roll for Trinity sessions, 1689, is likely to date from July 1689) or it may be explained after the date. Entries are arranged in a single numerical sequence in chronological order of signing. Two or more entries bearing the same date are arranged in alphabetical order of place. Late discoveries have been inserted in their correct places with a suffix (e.g. 999A, 999B). A notable group of eight certificates (77B–77J), all presented to Easter 1699 Quarter Sessions, was discovered by chance at a late stage when a guard-book entitled 'Wiltshire Records' compiled by C.R. Everett (died 1945) was transferred to the Wiltshire Record Office from the prints and drawings collection of the Wiltshire Archaeological & Natural History Society in April 1985. The collection was found to contain various Quarter Sessions documents, including eight meeting house certificates, which have now been replaced in their original context on the appropriate great roll. Impossible dates, where registration appears to precede certification, have been retained, but '[sic]' has been added after the date of registration.

Place, and description of premises. After the date comes the statement of place. This may be an ancient parish or smaller settlement – township, chapelry, tithing – within a parish, or an extra-parochial place. Ecclesiastical parishes within towns are not specified at this point. If the place was extra-parochial, that fact is noted, in square brackets if not stated in the document. Townships, chapelries and tithings are followed by the names of the ancient parishes in which they lay, as stated in the document. If the document gives no parish, or wrongly describes a place as a parish, or gives an incorrect parish, the correct ancient parish is supplied, queried in cases of doubt. The current forms of place-names are used in the text,<sup>6</sup> but all variants are recorded in the index entries. Interesting and unusual forms, however, follow the modern names in round brackets. In the case of ambiguous place-names (e.g. 'Donhead,' 'Codford') both alternatives are given; if there are three or more possibilities no attempt is made to identify which is correct, but if there are good reasons for preferring one to the others this is given, with a query. Unidentifiable place-names are left as found, enclosed within inverted commas. Homonymous places are identified where possible. If the document was signed in another parish this fact is noted.

After the place statement the description of the premises is given. Spelling and punctuation have been modernised and made consistent, redundant words and phrases have been omitted, and occasionally a sentence has been re-ordered for the sake of economy or to improve the sense. The description of the premises may include personal names, such as the owner, occupier or trustees. The spelling of surnames is retained, even if spelled differently elsewhere on the same document. The description may also include a more precise address than that given in the place statement; the spelling of street names, minor names and urban parishes has been modernised where identification is not in question. Most certificates continue by describing the legislation which gave rise to their existence; this and other common form has been omitted, but more interesting or eccentric formulae have been included.

Denomination. Some certificates give the denomination of the meeting house. Others ascribe a denomination to one or more signatories, and in some cases the denomination is apparent from a contemporary process note or endorsement (e.g. 'Rev. G. Gillard, Methodist Chapel, Salisbury'). In all such cases (some 45% of the total) the denomination is printed without brackets. Spelling of the names of denominations has been standardised, but a few interesting or unusual forms have been preserved. By comparing the signatories of other, more explicit, certificates it is often possible to establish the denominational allegiance of individuals, and hence of all the certificates they sign. In such cases the denomination is supplied, queried where appropriate, with a reference to another certificate. The affiliation of several hundred certificates has been established in this way. In cases where one of the following names whose allegiance is well known occur the denomination is given in square brackets followed by an asterisk: Isaac Bradnack (Wesleyan Methodist); George Gillard (Methodist); William Gilpin (Wesleyan Methodist); John Everett Good (Independent); John Saffery (Baptist); William Sanger (Methodist, Independent Methodist, see above p.xix); Mr. Thring of Wilton (Independent, probably James Thring). Other denominations have been identified from published local and denominational histories and archival sources. These are followed by an abbreviated reference. It must however be emphasised that supplied denominations are not part of the original documents and should not necessarily be trusted.

Signatures. After the denomination statement (or after the description of premises if no denomination is given) follow the signatures. These may be found in an orderly list or may occur haphazardly. In the former case the order is preserved in the calendar, but elsewhere the most prominent signatures are printed first, and the others in no particular order. If only the registration survives the copyist's order is preserved. Common forenames have been standardised, but surnames are spelled as they occur in the documents; variant spellings are however grouped together in the index. Illegible or partially illegible names are denoted by a query, a series of dots, or both; illiteracy is signified by 'the mark of . . .' Signatures are often qualified, either by a word such as junior, widow, esquire, or by an occupation or a place of residence. These are all (except the word 'witness') included, but spelling, punctuation and order of words may be modified, and there is one important exception. Quite a common formula following the signatures is 'housekeepers (or inhabitants) dwelling in the parish of . . .' Such information has been included. But often the formula runs 'housekeepers (or inhabitants) dwelling in or near the parish of . . .' The addition of 'or near' renders the information useless, since it would be reasonable to assume that the congregation of any meeting house was drawn from the immediately surrounding area. In such cases the information has been omitted.

Process and other notes, and sources. Following the signatures may be placed information of a very miscellaneous nature. All significant marginal notes and endorsements are recorded here, transcribed as found, within inverted commas and with an indication of where on the document they occur. Peculiarities of the document itself, or its relationship with other documents, are noted. Finally, in round brackets, is given the source, or location of the document calendared. With one exception the document is in a record office, and the appropriate bundle or piece number is given. A list of all the classes of documents used is given below.

APPENDIX

WILTSHIRE REGISTRATIONS UNDER THE DECLARATION OF INDULGENCE, 1672

As explained in the introduction (p.xi) the declaration of indulgence by Charles II enabled protestant dissenters to register their houses for religious worship. Over 4,000 houses in England and Wales were so registered between April 1672 and February 1673, although it is not certain that a licence was granted in every case. Two entry books among the State Papers Domestic (PRO SP44/27, SP44(38A) contain the registrations, and these, along with other documents of the period, were edited by G. Lyon Turner and published in 1911.<sup>1</sup> This work is scarce, and the following list of Wiltshire entries has been extracted from it, and arranged so far as is practicable in the same way as entries in the remainder of the present volume.

In the following list only registrations for religious meetings have been included; licences were issued also to teachers, but these have been omitted. Since every entry is taken from PRO SP44/38A only the folio number is given as a reference.
